FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Pacific Division, MATS
BY REAR ADM. JOHN M. HOSKINS, USN
Commander

WITH the second year of the Korean conflict drawing to a close, those of us in Pacific Division of the Military Air Transport Service look back over these two years with pride in our accomplishments while gearing ourselves for any new airlift to which we may be ordered.

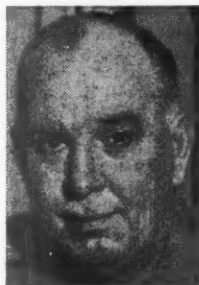

The airlifting MATS organization has been carrying military personnel and materiel since June, 1948, when the Naval Air Transport Service and the Air Transport Command were unified by Congress. It amazed the world during Operation Vittles, the Berlin Airlift, in 1948-49. Then, in June 1950, a PacDivMATS plane was the first United Nations aircraft to be destroyed in this war. It was strafed and demolished at Kimpo airfield just outside Seoul.

Since the Kimpo incident, over 41,000 combat casualties and other military patients have been airlifted to the U. S. from the Far East by Pacific Division. The outstanding feature of this Korean airlift, of which Air Force and Navy personnel in this command are justly proud, is that not one of these "air evacuees" flown by Pacific Division MATS has been lost in flight.

The routine and itinerary used by PacDivMATS in 1950 has been so well established that today, evacuation of the wounded by air operates in smooth fashion. The Douglas C54 Skymasters, Navy R5D's, and the Boeing C97 Stratofreighters leave Haneda Air Base, Tokyo, carrying a passenger load of patients plus a medical air evac team of nurses and flight corpsmen. Often times, the C97's fly this nonstop, while the C54's stop at the Naval station on Midway Island for refueling.

A waiting convoy of ambulances greets the men at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu... off to Tripler Army Hospital for a stopover rest... and then to Travis Air Force Base, Calif. The final leg of this mercy flight takes the patient to a hospital near his home. Too much praise cannot be given the women of the Red Cross who meet all Air Evac flights with juices, cookies, cigarettes and friendly smile.

Pay Awaits the Holidays

There will be no move toward a meeting of the Senate and House conferees on the Service pay bill until after 22 April. When the House returns from its Easter vacation on that day, Senator Russell and Representative Vinson, chairman of the respective committees, will have to agree on a date for the meeting.

How long it will then take to reach a compromise, secure approval of both houses to such an agreement, and process the measure to the White House for final approval cannot be foretold. But unless the whole procedure is carried out and the President's signature affixed within ten days of that date, the Services will be another month behind their civilian counterparts, whose 10 per cent pay increase was retroactive to 1 July 1951.

Under the House version the Service pay increase would become effective the first of the month after approval; under the Senate version the first of the month in which it is approved.

There were reports this week that Representative Vinson deliberately refrained from trying to set up a pre-holiday meeting of the conferees because he feared that the temper of the House, then engaged in slashing military appropriations, would be prejudicial to the Services in the matter of pay.

Representative Vinson has stated that the pay bill should provide a flat across-the-board percentage increase. Undoubtedly, the House conferees will seek to obtain a boost from the three per cent increase in base pay voted by the Senate.

House Debates Cuts In Defense Funds

The debate on the military appropriations bill opened in the House on Monday, 7 April, with the plea by Representative George Mahon (D-Tex.), military appropriations subcommittee chairman, that there be no additional cuts below the $4.2 billion reduction recommended by the House Appropriations Committee.

Pointing out that this represents a $10 billion decrease in military funds voted for the current fiscal year, Congressman Mahon said "the people who are talking in fantastic figures about reducing the military budget by billions and billions of dollars are, as a rule, the people who know the least about it."

"Nothing would please our enemies more," he continued, "than if this Congress were to turn its back on the preparedness program."

In his preliminary remarks, Representative Mahon declared he was "not willing to stand on the floor of the House of Representatives and be a party to sowing the seed of World War III. That big war," he said, "is what we are trying to avoid by our military buildup."

Immediately, there was some confusion, as is inevitable in budget debates, concerning obligations and expenditures. Representative Mahon took pains to explain that the $57 billion voted for the Services previously and yet unspent has

Service Slow-Down In Promotions Voted

The House of Representatives voted this week to substitute a "slow-down" in Service promotions for its original committee recommendation that would have resulted in about 24,000 demotions.

Elsewhere in the appropriation bill the House dealt severely with the administration's recommendations for defense funds for 1953.

The House voted to cut Armed Forces funds for the next fiscal year by $4.7 billion from the $50.9 billion recommended by the President. Furthermore, the House stipulated that actual expenditures for 1953, planned at a $52 billion rate, must not exceed $46 billion.

Representative Howard W. Smith (D-Va.) sponsored the amendment to limit spending to $46 billion, an action certain to result in an extension of the military "stretch-out."

After the House completed action, the Army was left with $12.2 billion; Navy, $12.8 billion and Air Force, $20.7 billion. The over-all cut from funds asked by the President was 9.2 per cent.

When debate on the money bill began on Monday, 7 April, Representative James P. S. Devereux (R-Md.), a retired Marine Corps brigadier general, called attention to an amendment sponsored by Representative Glenn R. Davis (R-Wisc.) which would result in thousands of officer demotions.

Congressman Devereux protested that the amendment was adopted without any testimony whatsoever by military officials.

This was pointed out in last week's issue of THE JOURNAL, which reported the statement by Congressman Davis that when actual debate began in the House he would revise his amendment to prevent a serious injustice to officer personnel of the Armed Forces.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee spoke out against the plan to thwart officer promotions. He revealed that the action by Congressman Davis not only would prevent promotions in fiscal year 1953, but would require a reduction in grade of 24,000 to 25,000 officers on 1 July 1952.

Representative Vinson said that the amendment would nullify the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

At this point, Congressman Davis was recognized by the Speaker to discuss his amendment. He said his amendment is designed to establish the principle that "Congress shall maintain control of the promotions among the commissioned officers of the Armed Services."

Admitting imperfections in his hastily drafted rider to the appropriations bill, published in last week's issue, Congressman Davis substituted the following table in an amendment which was adopted as follows:

"During the last quarter of the fiscal year 1953, no funds appropriated by this act shall be used for the pay, compensation, or allowances of officers of the Armed Forces." (Please turn to Page 997)

Naval Vessels Blast Red Rail Networks

Rain and heavy fog during much of this week greatly restricted Korean military operations on land, on sea, and in the air. There was only minor sporadic ground fighting, and considerable naval activity, especially along the east coast, where Allied fleet units, led by the newly-arrived U. S. Battleship Iowa, bombarded heavily the Red transportation networks. Combat air operations were greatly curtailed by adverse weather.

The Battleship Iowa blasted hillsides along the vulnerable east coast railway, causing landslides which closed four tunnels and blocked the rail line in several other places. Other surface vessels bombarded Red positions on both coasts, but results were difficult to determine because of the dense fog that prevailed for several days. The U. S. Destroyer-Minesweeper Endicott and the Destroyer Hamner were taken under fire by Red shore batteries, and the Endicott was straddled by shell bursts.

On the ground there was a comparative lull during much of the week, broken only by light patrol actions, and by a series of small scale jabs by Communist infantrymen on the east and east central fronts, all of which were repulsed. An Allied patrol was cut off west of the Mundung-ni Valley by Red troops, but succeeded in fighting its way back to United Nations lines.

Air Action

Whenever weather conditions permitted Allied land planes and carrier-based aircraft hammered front lines, railways and roads, and Red supply installations. Patrol operations of American F-86 Sabre Jets were limited by poor flying conditions, which also kept enemy planes grounded most of the time. There were comparatively few Red planes sighted during the week, but on Sunday, 6 April, four enemy MIGs were destroyed, two probably destroyed and eight damaged.

On the western front in a sharp engagement late last week west of Yonchon an enemy battalion, supported by artillery, was repulsed after having attacked an Allied outpost. United Nations artillery fire was directed against the attackers and they were driven off. Later another position in this area, from which Allied troops had previously withdrawn, was re-occupied without opposition.

North of Chorwon a United Nations patrol engaged an enemy company and then withdrew after a sharp fight. Subsequently, after an exchange of artillery fire, the Allied patrol continued its mission and routed an enemy platoon in a brief fire fight.

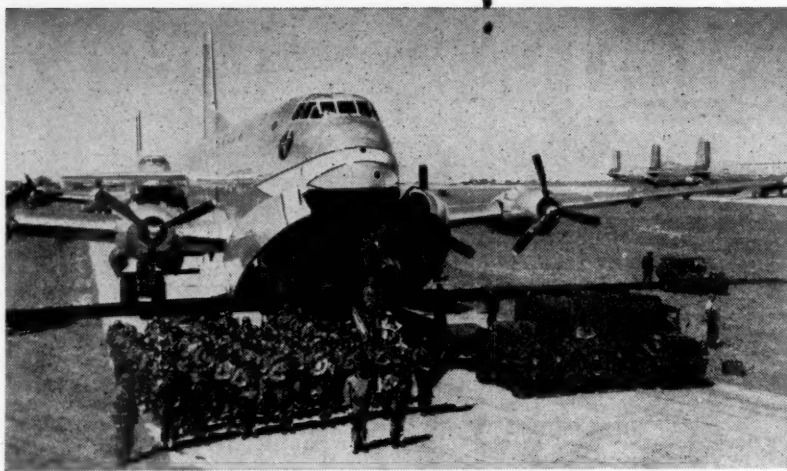

Two United Nations patrols northeast of Kumwha engaged a small enemy group, killing and wounding a number of Reds. West of the Pukhan River two enemy platoons probed an advance Allied position, but their attack was repulsed after a half-hour fight. Elsewhere along the central front United Nations patrols fought light engagements with Red groups up to three platoons in strength.

Patrol Escapes Trap

Northeast of the Punch Bowl an Allied unit repulsed a small probe by the enemy. West of the Mundung-ni Valley an Allied patrol was almost completely surrounded and cut off for several hours by aggressive Red troops, but finally succeeded in fighting its way out of the trap and back to friendly lines. In the same general area advance Allied units repulsed a small enemy probing attack.

Near the extreme eastern end of the line an enemy unit probed an Allied position south of Kosong and then withdrew after sporadic fighting for an hour. A United Nations patrol in the same area destroyed several bunkers and inflicted a number of casualties on the enemy.

Gun strikes by surface craft of the United Nations naval forces provided material aid for Allied ground troops in the Kansong-Kosong area. The U. S. Heavy Cruiser St. Paul and the Destroyer Henderson fired hundreds of rounds of five-inch shells on enemy troops and installations near the land battle line. Dense fog prevented shore fire control parties from observing more than a part of the results.

USS Iowa Busy

The U. S. Battleship Iowa signaled its return to combat duty by bombarding a series of targets along east coast roads and rail lines. Accompanied by the U. S. Destroyer Mackenzie the Iowa ranged in the Choho-Songjin area and fired on the sides of rocky hills overhanging the important east coast railway. Direct hits on the cliffs caused landslides, which closed four tunnels and blocked the tracks at several other locations.

The Iowa was taken out of moth balls last summer and returned to active service after reconditioning last August. It replaces the Wisconsin as the principal capital ship in Korean waters.

The U. S. Destroyer Hamner delivered round-the-clock harassing and interdiction fire in the Kojo area, working with air spotting crews while firing daylight missions. Numerous bunkers, automatic weapons emplacements, troop shelters and other buildings were destroyed. Shore batteries fired star shells at night and into the daylight fog in an effort to locate the Hamner, and Red guns opened up on the destroyer, but all the shells fell short of the warship.

A number of small vessels patrolled the approaches to Wonsan harbor, and fired on bridges, sampans, and other military targets. Among the craft participating in this operation were the British Destroyers Concord and Cossack, and the American Destroyers Chandler, and Silverstein, and the Destroyer-Minesweeper Endicott.

Minesweeping

The Endicott was also engaged in minesweeping and bombardment operations in Chongjin harbor, 70 miles south of the Soviet border, where it ran into heavy shore fire. There were a number of near misses and the warship was straddled many times by shell bursts. The shore guns were taken under counter-battery fire, and planes from the U. S. Heavy Carrier Philippine Sea bombed them, with the result that they were soon silenced.

Dense fog prevailed during most of the week on the Yellow Sea, interfering with naval action on the west coast of Korea. The British Cruiser Belfast and the U. S. Destroyer Chevalier shelled targets on the Ongjin Peninsula. In the Haeju approaches the Canadian Destroyer Nootka and the U. S. LST-692 fired at gun positions and small boats.

Though greatly handicapped by poor flying conditions and low visibility carrier-based Navy planes continued heavy interdiction strikes on east coast transportation systems, but fog and low clouds made impossible an accurate assessment of damage. On the west coast British planes from the Light Carrier Glory pounded Red troops dispersed among the western hills.

Navy-Marine Air Summary

In a summary of naval air operations for the month of March, it was announced this week that American carrier-based Navy and Marine planes and Marine shore-based aircraft and naval patrol squadrons flew 8,000 combat sorties dur-

1952 AER Fund Campaign

The 1952 joint fund campaign of Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society was initiated on 1 April by Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, Director of Army Emergency Relief. Commanding Generals and Commanding Officers of all commands within the Continental U. S. and all commanders of major commands overseas were sent letters relative to the campaign.

It was suggested that contributions be solicited on the average basis of not over $1.00 from officers and 50 cents from enlisted men. It is hoped that every member of the Army will be given an opportunity to contribute on this modest basis and thereby be made familiar with the financial assistance which he or members of his family may receive in times of need or distress. Sufficient informational material for distribution to every member of a command is available and may be obtained upon request to Director, Army Emergency Relief, Dept. of the Army, Washington 25, D. C. The time and method of conducting the campaign is entirely discretionary with local or higher commanders.

The total disbursements by AER for assistance through loans and grants amounted to $1,196,904 in 1951, as compared to $686,000 so spent in 1950. These expenditures are expected to continue at this level and from present indications will probably reach or exceed $1,500,000 during this year.

In support of the campaign a message from General J. Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff, USA, addressed "To Members of the Army and Their Families Everywhere" is quoted:

"We of the Army have always been justifiably proud of our great tradition of doing our utmost to take care of our own. There is nothing more heartwarming than the thought of having helped a comrade at a time when he has needed help. There is nothing more comforting than the knowledge that we are all concerned with one another's welfare.

"This great tradition has grown and been maintained in the Army largely because of the splendid work of the Army Emergency Relief and the Army Relief Society. During these days of conflict and tension when many soldiers are separated from their loved ones and when frequent moves cause unexpected expense and hardship, it is especially important that all of us do our share in making possible the helpful service that these two fine organizations are prepared to administer.

"The 1952 Joint Fund Campaign offers an opportunity for all of us to contribute towards our common welfare. I sincerely commend these organizations to you and urge that you give them your earnest support in the year ahead."

Marine Air Group 31 has been commissioned at Cherry Point, N. C., as a new unit of the Third Marine Air Wing, and Lt. Col. John P. Newlands has been named commanding officer.

McCormick Takes Helm; Names Subordinates

In an impressive ceremony at Norfolk, Va., on 10 April, Admiral Byrd D. McCormick, Commander in Chief of the U. S. Atlantic Fleet, formally established the new Allied Atlantic Command of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and assumed duties and responsibilities as Supreme Allied Commander Atlantic.

Admiral McCormick, whose new command is co-equal with that of General Eisenhower's Supreme Allied Command, Europe, called on the NATO member nations for "greater effort" in building up "the forces which are required to maintain control of the high seas and the coastal waters which concern us." He said the "present level of forces introduces risks which are unacceptable," adding that "Even the maritime forces which have appeared in NATO planning will fall short of those necessary to give Europe and the Allied European Command the direct and indirect support we envisage they will require from us."

Admiral McCormick's Deputy is Vice Adm. Sir William Andrewes of the British Royal Navy; his Chief of Staff, Rear Adm. Cato D. Glover, USN. The first official act of the new SACIANT commander was to designate his principal subordinate commanders. They are:

Admiral Sir George Creasey, RN, Commander in Chief Eastern Atlantic Area; Air Marshal Sir Alick Stevens, RAF, Air Commander in Chief Eastern Atlantic Area; Vice Adm. Sir Maurice J. Mansergh, RN, Commander North-East Atlantic Sub-Area; Air Vice Marshal T. C. Traill, RAF, Air Commander North-East Atlantic Sub-Area; Rear Adm. J. H. F. Crombie, RN, Commander Northern European Sub-Area; Air Vice Marshal H. T. Lydford, RAF, Air Commander North Sea.

Also, Vice Adm. A. Robert, French Navy, Commander Bay of Biscay Sub-Area; Vice Adm. A. Sol, French Navy, Commander Maritime Forces Morocco; Rear Adm. R. E. S. Bidwell, RCN, Commander Canadian Atlantic Sub-Area; Air Comm. A. D. Ross, RCAF, Air Commander Canadian Atlantic Sub-Area; Vice Adm. Oscar C. Badger, USN, Commander United States Atlantic Sub-Area.

In his capacity as Commander in Chief of the Atlantic and Atlantic Fleet, Admiral McCormick will serve additionally as Commander in Chief of the NATO Western Atlantic Area. He noted that the titles of his new subordinate commanders "are not necessarily firm."

During the command assumption ceremonies, which were witnessed by a large gathering of high-ranking Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps officers, the fourteen flags of the NATO nations were raised in front of the new SACIANT Headquarters while a Navy band played the national anthem of each country.

Among those present were the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstjerne; Under Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Whitehair, the U. S. Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William M. Fechteler, and representatives of each of the NATO countries.

Lack Of UMT "Serious"

Says General Bradley

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, this week termed the absence of Universal Military Training "a serious omission in an otherwise sound military program."

General Bradley warned that "United States preparedness is below par—compared to the dangers that confront us—and will continue to be below par, until each of us realizes that every able American must be trained for defense."

The JCS Chairman said "this decade will be a dangerous one unless we meet this need for a reserve of trained manpower in our mobilization base, and maintain the effort, and the sacrifices which such universal service requires."

Speaking at Macon, Ga., on 7 April, General Bradley stressed that "we must exhibit perpetual preparedness to deter the perpetual communist threat. The two ways of life, the free and the fettered, will never be completely reconciled," he observed. "We may exist apart, but only at the price of our eternal vigilance."

Care of Dependents

A special hearing to investigate the possibility of utilizing voluntary health insurance organizations to provide care for the dependents of Service personnel was held 10 April by a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare.

The subcommittee, under the chairmanship of Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D-NY), has been considering bills to provide maternity and infant care to service dependents in State facilities, with Federal financing. Opponents of the measure felt that it should be handled by permitting voluntary pay-roll deductions for voluntary health insurance.

At the hearing, Mr. E. A. Van Steenwyk, Director of the Associated Hospital Service of Philadelphia, told the Committee that he did not think it would be feasible to carry on such insurance for maternity cases only, particularly on a nation-wide basis. He thought it might be possible for a person to pay for all but maternity care and to have the Government pay for maternity care.

Hazard Pay Hearings

Further Senate hearings on flight pay and other forms of hazard pay were postponed this week until next Wednesday, 16 April. No sessions of the subcommittee were held this week due to the death of a brother of Senator Hunt, subcommittee chairman.

During the debate on the pay bill, Senator Russell, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said that he believed his committee could present a bill by 15 May.

Gen. Crittenger Urges Sustained Defense Effort

Declaring that alternate cycles of strength and weakness do not serve the interests of our country, Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittenger, Commanding General of the First Army, this week called for a sustained effort as our national goal.

General Crittenger spoke 4 April at a ceremony in New York City commemorating the election of General George Washington as the first President of the United States. In his short remarks, General Crittenger said:

"Let us now recall some of these characteristics of Washington. First, realism and steadfastness were qualities which the Father of our Country possessed to a marked degree. In these times of worldwide tension, a realistic attitude toward our problems, is vital. We must realize as a people and as a nation, our capabilities, our potentialities, our limitations, and our shortcomings. Such a good, hard look at ourselves, such a survey of the contemporary scene, provides a realism that could be of great value on this anniversary. The alternate cycles of strength and weakness in national defense do not serve the best interests of our country. Instead, sustained effort should be our goal. Today, as always, we Americans can best face the challenge of life with strength, and an abiding steadfastness to stand up for the ideals which have made this country great.

"Next, Washington's courage—his courage was a tower of strength to the struggling young nation during and after the Revolutionary War. So must we be courageous in our decisions and action. Now is not the time for irresolution.

"Now we come to firmness—firmness was another of Washington's traits which could well be applied to our national character. As individuals and as a people he would have us be steadfast in the face of uncertainty, vigorous in our action, and resolute and determined that our country shall endure.

"Next, his sincerity—Washington's sincerity could be our keynote and guide, as individuals in our relations with each other, and as a nation, in our dealings with other nations.

"Lastly, honesty. We have had impressed upon us Washington's honesty of conviction. America lives by certain principles of honesty, which constitute our birthright. To lose sight of these principles, which are the very heart and life-blood of our Democracy, could be tragic."

Dependents' Pensions

The Senate this week passed the House-approved bill increasing some pension rates for veterans and Service widows. The bill now goes back to the House because of amendments made in the Senate.

The Senate passed the bill as reported out by its committee, and as described in detail on page 910 of THE JOURNAL of 29 March. Only change made on the floor was to increase by 15 instead of five per cent the pensions to Spanish War, Civil War and Indian war veterans with non-service-connected disabilities. The rates to widows remain as reported.

Sen. Kilgore Against Recruiting Athletes

An over emphasis on recruiting athletes for the U. S. Military Academy might reduce the ability of the Army to secure the best candidates and might also lower public esteem for the Academy, Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D-W. Va.), declared in a statement this week.

At the same time, Senator Kilgore gave out copies of a letter he had received from the Department stating that the Academy does approach young students who show athletic promise and encourage them to qualify for appointment. However, it was said that this is done only in those instances where the students have the necessary scholastic background and proper moral and physical qualifications.

Senator Kilgore has a bill before Congress seeking the appointment of a commission to study and investigate the present military educational systems.

Army Letter

The letter he received from the Department of the Army is as follows:

"Dear Senator Kilgore:
"This letter is in further reference to your inquiry concerning the recruitment of high-school athletes for appointment to the United States Military Academy.

"In looking into this matter thoroughly, I find that after careful consideration by the Department of the Army, the Superintendent of the Military Academy has been authorized to approach young high school students, who show athletic and leadership promise, along with the necessary scholastic attainments, with a view to encouraging them to qualify for appointment as cadets at the United States Military Academy. I should like to emphasize that, before a young man is urged to try for an appointment to West Point, he must be adjudged to have the necessary scholastic background and the proper moral and physical qualifications to permit him to pass the course at the Military Academy and to become a successful officer. Experience over an extended period of time, not only in the United States Army but in foreign armies, has proved that athletic participation by the young men who are studying to become officers adds distinctly in making these cadets into well-rounded officers. The benefit from the physical conditioning involved is obvious. More than that is the ability inculcated in them to stand up under rough competition involving both physical stamina and nervous stability. Military annals show a high degree of correlation between athletic ability and success in the military profession.

"Any cadet who is competing for a position on one of the Military Academy teams or is engaging in any other form of extracurricular activity is required to meet all the mental, moral and physical requirements that every other cadet is meeting. No concessions are made to any individual because of his athletic ability or because of some other talent which he may possess.

"I trust that the above information will furnish you a complete reply to your recent letter. As I have explained, the major purpose of the plan outlined above is to improve the sources of potential leadership for the Army of the future. If you should desire any further information of any kind on this subject, I trust that you will not hesitate to call upon me.

"With kindest personal regards, I am
"Very sincerely,
"MILES REBER,
"Major General, GS
"Chief of Legislative Liaison."

Senator's Comments

In his statement Senator Kilgore said:
"Athletics are an important part of military training, but a policy of recruiting athletes for West Point might well give the American people the idea that the Army is placing too much emphasis on that phase of the training.

"The only 'recruiting cases' I know about concern outstanding football players. The Army should give further study to this matter because it could lead to over-emphasis on turning out football teams.

"West Point was created solely for the purpose of training men to lead the Army. Anytime the Army strays from such a policy, even if it seems popular to do so, inevitably will lead to national criticism of the Academy.

"The nation has not forgotten, and properly so, the recent scandal at West Point. Over-emphasis on recruiting athletes could well produce another national furor.

"The end result would be to reduce the ability of the Army to secure our finest young men for West Point training, and at the same time to lower public esteem for the Academy."

Back Pay to Army Nurses

The Senate Judiciary Committee voted this week to report favorably on the bill (S.2256) to pay Col. Julia O. Flikke, AUS-Ret., and Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, USA-Ret., back pay which was denied them by an adverse decision of the Comptroller General in 1942 when they were superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively, of the Army Nurse Corps. The Committee said:

"The purpose of this proposed legislation, as amended, is to provide for payment to Col. Julia O. Flikke, Army of the United States (retired), of the sum of $1,534.44, and to Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, United States Army (retired), of the sum of $1,865.05, in full satisfaction of their claims against the United States for the amounts of pay and allowances lost by them as a result of a ruling of the Comptroller General interpreting the public law under which they were appointed as officers in the Army of the United States, which ruling was issued after they had rendered active service pursuant to their appointments, and had the effect of depriving them of the full amount of the pay and allowances due them as officers in the grade to which they had been appointed by the Secretary of War."

Plan Apartment At Knox

Construction of an eight-story $2,000,000 efficiency apartment house, the first of its kind to be built under the Wherry Housing Act, will get under way within the next two months at Ft. Knox, Ky.

The privately-financed structure will be of reinforced concrete and will have 180 efficiency units and 20 one-bedroom apartments. This will be in addition to 1,500 units in the Post's other Wherry projects, Gaffey Heights, Rose Terrace and Prichard Place.

The building will be open to families of all officers, enlisted men and civilians at Fort Knox. It is estimated by Lt. Col. Campbell W. Newman, Knox special projects officer, that construction will be finished in one year.

Heads North Pacific Div.

Assignment of Col. Emerson C. Itschner as North Pacific Division Engineer at Portland, Oreg., is announced by Lt. Col. Lewis A. Pick, USA, Chief of Engineers.

Colonel Itschner succeeds Brig. Gen. Orville E. Walsh, USA, who was recently named to supervise the newly-created Mediterranean Division.

Colonel Itschner has been Army Engineer for the Fifth Army, Chicago, since November 1951 when he returned from service in Korea. While in Korea as I Corps Engineer he received the Purple Heart.

Reenlistment Bonus Ruling

Soldiers who fail to serve their full term of reenlistment must refund a pro rata share of their reenlistment bonus, according to a revision of AR 35-1525 not yet off the press.

This policy is announced by Maj. Gen. Bickford E. Sawyer, Chief of Army Finance, and is effective retroactive to 26 Oct. 1951. It will apply to any enlisted member who either voluntarily or as the result of his own misconduct does not complete the enlistment for which the bonus was paid.

All pay and allowances, except quarters, subsistence and travel allowances or soldiers deposits with interest thereon, can be used to collect the refund due.

Refunds will be computed on the number of whole years of the contract which the soldier did not complete. Periods less than a year will not be included.

Enlisted members who received the bonus and fail to complete the term of their contract are considered indebted to the U. S. Government.

These include persons who transfer to Enlisted Reserve Corps, and did not remain on active duty; who separate for purpose of reenlistment, or for some specific reason—such as to attend school, fill own vacancy, join foreign service, re-up for an unspecified period or to accept certain assignments; who resign by reason of marriage (women).

Also included are those who are separated by reason of disability resulting from misconduct, wilful neglect, or incurred during unauthorized absence; those who have been found unfit, unsuitable or disloyal; those so sentenced by court martial or convicted by civil court; and other reasons.

Reenlistment bonuses amount to $40, $90, $160, $250, and $360 for two to six years, respectively.

Newest advance in railroading . . .

ERIE'S Radio-Equipped Main Line!

Erie Railroad's Main Line—85% of it—is now equipped with Farnsworth radio. In clear or foul weather, orders and information can be transmitted—linking cab and caboose . . . moving trains . . . dispatchers . . . wayside stations . . . even crewmen on foot. This is the most extensive and comprehensive main line radio-telephone communication system ever installed. Soon its coverage will be complete—providing full radio communication between trains and 59 wayside stations, New York to Chicago. 204 mobile units are already in service; 68 more are in process of installation—in addition to 55 mobile and 6 base stations in yard and terminal service. All equipment was engineered and manufactured by an associate of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation. Comprehensive, practical, fully-proven radio systems are now available to meet the exacting requirements of America's railroads.

House Votes Carrier Out

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass.) this week attempted to reinstate the Navy's second large aircraft carrier in the 1953 appropriations bill, but the effort was defeated.

Meanwhile, Navy Secretary Dan. A. Kimball, just returned from a tour of the Far East, said the Navy would try to have the carrier put back in the bill when it comes up for Senate debate. He said there is a pressing need to "keep weapons up to date" and that the Navy is "going to have to have" the new carrier.

Mr. Kimball also confirmed a story appearing in THE JOURNAL on 29 March that the Navy is considering the adoption of a new British steam-driven catapult for the USS Forrester, first of the 60,000-ton carriers.

Prior to the House action in removing the second large carrier from the appropriations bill, Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, testified that there are seven "major reasons" why the Navy needs the vessel. These were:

- 1—Increased weight of aircraft.
- 2—Need for increased fuel capacity due to jet propulsion.
- 3—Need for more catapults for launching modern fighters.
- 4—Need for more aviation ordnance storage space.
- 5—The increased size of aircraft.
- 6—The increase in aircraft landing speeds.
- 7—The need for better protection against torpedoes, bombs, and other weapons.

"This type of vessel," Admiral Fechteler said, "must become our principal class of aircraft carrier in order for the Navy and naval aviation to carry out its necessary functions." He said, "By 1954," because of the Navy's switch to jets which will require longer and longer decks for conventional take-off, "we plan on using catapults for launching all fighter-type aircraft."

He continued, "As it will be quite impossible to launch and recover continuously to maintain a constant air patrol, it is believed that we will have to rely primarily on the rapid launch of large numbers of fast-climbing interceptors which will be launched as enemy raids develop." He said, "The Forrester type carrier excels for operations of this type because it has four catapults."

New weapons also enter the picture, Admiral Fechteler said. Atomic weapons, guided missiles and a new series of conventional bombs with long streamlined shapes "require more space per ton," he pointed out. "This means," he added, "that space is a controlling factor and a new ship is required if we are to improve the situation."

Asked if the Joint Chiefs of Staff had approved the second Forrestal-class carrier, Admiral Fechteler said "it would not be accurate" to say the JCS have specifically approved the construction of this new carrier; "collectively and individually," he said, "they are aware that we are asking for it, but they have taken no action on it one way or the other."

In considering force levels for each of the Services, the JCS "do not concern themselves with the particular equipment that is to be furnished the various elements of those forces," he said.

Navy Replacement Cost

The current replacement cost today of Navy assets is placed at a minimum of $71,000,000,000.

NAVY COLLECTS SCRAP

Iron scrap collections at Navy activities totaled 15,057 tons in January, 1952.

Marine Warehouses

Eight warehouses, to cost an estimated $8,000,000, will be constructed at the Marine Corps training base, Camp Joseph H. Pendleton, Oceanside, Calif.

The additional facilities will bring total expenditures for Marine Corps covered storage buildings in 1952 to more than $25,000,000.

Previously, Navy Civil Engineers announced warehouse construction at Albany, Ga., and Camp Lejeune, N. C., both Marine Corps installations, at a cost of more than $18,000,000.

"Expansion of Camp Pendleton, as part of the Marine Corps training program, has overtaxed existing warehouse space," the Navy said.

The new storage facilities will be erected in the Chappo Flats industrial and service area of the California base. They will be one-story, permanent-type warehouses, each providing a floor space of 45,000 square feet.

Midshipmen Cruises

Thirty-five ships, including the battleships Missouri, Wisconsin and New Jersey, will visit European ports during the 1952 summer midshipmen training cruises.

Three summer practice cruises will be held, enabling midshipmen to get practical training to supplement classroom studies in engineering, gunnery, navigation, communication and tactics.

On board ships of the three cruises will be 5100 Naval Academy and Naval Reserve midshipmen. Major ships of the first two cruises will visit ports in Western Europe and the British Isles. The third cruise will operate in the Caribbean. Ports will be named when clearances are complete, the Navy said.

The first cruise will sail from Norfolk on 9 June and return on 5 Aug. In the 26 ships of this practice squadron will be 1900 first and third classmen from the Naval Academy and 1700 seniors and sophomores from Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps units at 28 colleges and universities.

The squadron will include the Missouri and Wisconsin, the cruisers Macon and Des Moines, the carrier Saipan, ten destroyers, four minelayers, three high speed transports and four oilers.

On the return voyage from Europe these ships will rendezvous at sea on 17 July and proceed to the Caribbean for gunnery exercises before visiting Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, from 31 July to 2 Aug.

The second and third cruises will be exclusively for NROTC students. The second cruise will leave Norfolk on 18 July with 1500 NROTC midshipmen aboard and will return to Norfolk on 5 Sept. Headed by the New Jersey, the squadron will include the cruiser Roanoke, six destroyers, a high speed transport and a tanker.

The third cruise will have 630 contract NROTC midshipmen aboard the cruiser Pittsburgh, four minesweepers and a high speed transport. These ships will sail from Norfolk on 10 Aug. and return on 5 Sept.

Ten ships of the second cruise will rendezvous in Caribbean waters with the six ships of the third cruise on 26 Aug. for gunnery exercises, the Navy said.

Rear Adm. James L. Holloway will command the entire midshipmen's cruising force. He will personally take charge of the first cruise with his flag on the Missouri.

Rear Adm. Harry R. Thurber, Commander Battleship Division 2, will command the second cruise. His flag will be on the New Jersey. Rear Adm. Frank T. Watkins, Commander Cruiser Division 2, will command the third cruise.

Marine Generals Shift

Brig. Gen. William J. Whaling, who has been Assistant Commander of the First Marine Division in Korea, will report this month to the Marine Corps Recruit Depot at San Diego to be Chief of Staff. He succeeds Brig. Gen. Reginald H. Ridgeley, jr., who is expected to be named Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, of the Marine Corps, as previously disclosed in THE JOURNAL.

General Whaling was relieved by Brig. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, formerly with the Third Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

At the same time, it was announced that Brig. Gen. Edward W. Snedeker, former Chief of Staff of the Third Division, will report to the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, on 1 May for assignment. His new duty was not announced.

2d Mar Div Convention

The Second Marine Division Association announced that it will hold its third annual convention at the Statler Hotel in Boston, Mass., 18-20 July.

This will be the first time the "Tarawa Division" has met in New England. Two previous reunions were held in Washington, D. C., and Chicago. A record turnout is expected from among the 80,000 former members of the Division, according to Brig. Gen. James P. Riseley, President of the Association.

Attending the convention will be Lt. Gen. Julian C. Smith, USMC (ret.), past president and wartime leader of the Division during the assault at Tarawa.

Highlights of the three-day reunion will include a New England clambake on 18 July, a fashion show and brunch for the women guests followed by a banquet and dance on 19 July, and the traditional memorial services on 20 July.

Inquiries for additional information and reservations should be addressed to: Stanley Robbins, 20 Malden St., Watertown, Mass.

Units of 3d MAF Move

Marine Air Group 31, first commissioned group of the new Third Marine Air Wing, began moving this week from the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, N. C., to its new home, MCAS, Miami.

At present, the group, commanded by Lt. Col. J. P. Newlands, is composed of VMF-314, VMF(A)-324, Hedron-31, MAMS-31 and MABS-31. Special staff sections of the Wing are also making the move and the entire Wing is expected to be located in Miami by 1 May.

Marine EM Promotions

More than 50,000 Marine Corps enlisted men and women will be promoted to higher ranks during May and June of this year, according to estimates released this week by Marine Headquarters.

Promotion allocations for May and June have been set up as follows:

- To M/Sgt—1,800
- To T/Sgt—4,200
- To S/Sgt—11,500
- To Sgt—12,600
- To Cpl—21,700

In all, the Corps will have promoted approximately 117,700 enlisted personnel during the four-month period March through June, including 49,700 to corporal, 34,600 to sergeant, 22,000 to staff, 8,600 to technical sergeant, and 2,800 to master.

NROTC Candidates

The Navy this week named 1,800 successful candidates who will receive a Navy subsidized education and a Navy or Marine Corps commission under the NROTC programs. A group of 450 alternates was also announced.

In addition, 200 candidates who are selected annually from the Fleet, will be announced at a later date.

Pacific Div. MATS

contract, over 33,000 tons of war materials and 130,000 general passengers have been moved to the Far East by the Pacific Division of MATS since the beginning of the Korean conflict.

The air transport operation is not the only function of MATS. The supervision and direction of three other highly important services contribute to the success of the MATS effort.

The Airways and Air Communications Service (AACS), worldwide as is MATS, extends its radio fingers over treacherous expanses of ocean, mountains and continents aiding the pilot in arriving at his destination safely. These fixed radio guides combined with the mobile units can quickly be placed in operation wherever and in whatever strength is necessary to support air transport operations, transforming the air lanes around the globe to American highways.

The Air Weather Service (AWS) operates observation stations and aerial weather reconnaissance squadrons over the world and sends this information to weather centers where maps and forecasts are transmitted to all stations.

Air Rescue Service

Patrolling PacDivMATS air lanes over 5,000 miles of the world's surface is the Air Rescue Service (ARS). These squadrons are deployed about the world so that, in addition to protecting existing air routes, they can be shifted to areas of particular need as was done in Korea. Over 4,000 United Nations troops owe their lives to the men of ARS. Using helicopters, amphibians, SB-17's and SB-29's with lifeboats fastened to them, crash boats and land equipment—the ARS does not only aid downed airmen behind enemy lines, but also helps civilian agencies search for lost aircraft, disabled ships and assist where their equipment can be of help.

The three flights of ARS attached to Pacific Division and the 13 others in the Pacific area work under four phases of operations: notification, search, aid and rescue. Air Rescue is truly another humanitarian service of the MATS program.

That MATS is not just an "airline" service is exemplified by the strong emphasis placed by MATSmen on the "global" concept. That belief is expressed in Pacific Division. The distance covered from the Eastern and Western terminals—Travis in California and Dhahran in Saudi Arabia—show that MATS is something more than an airline organization.

MATS Ready

When the Communists first crossed the 38th parallel into South Korea, MATS was prepared to spring to action. Routes were immediately established. They now include MATS terminals at Johnston Island, Kwajalein, Guam, Okinawa, Iwo Jima, Tokyo, Korea, Manila, Bangkok, Calcutta, Karachi, New Delhi and Dhahran.

Departmental offices of the staff of the Pacific Division headquarters located at Hickam AFB include a combination of Air Force and Navy personnel working together. This "team action" has prompted observers to label MATS "the first successful example of unification."

On 1 June 1952, military airlifters in almost every country in the world will celebrate the fourth birthday of MATS. Four years ago, MATS personnel were concerned with the Berlin Airlift in Europe and had little time to celebrate birthdays. Today, the situation is similar—except this time it's on the other side of the world, the Far East.

Alerted Military Air Transport Service personnel the world over, stand by ready to man their planes—both hospital and cargo—For National Defense.

One political party, today, claims Thomas Jefferson for its very own. You hear much of this claim at the various "Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinners" this time of year.

He is, indeed, its revered philosopher. In view of this, it is well to recall what his philosophy really was, as revealed by his ever-living words, so pertinent today. He was the great foe of bureaucracy and of overcentralization. He was the implacable enemy of dishonesty in government.

His philosophy is as far from that of many of today's law-makers as white is from black. Let us revert to his principles, while there is yet time to keep our country great.

Shift Five Generals

The Air Force has announced reassignment of five general officers.

Maj. Gen. Francis H. Griswold, now Military Director for Production and Requirements, Department of Defense Munitions Board, will become Commanding General, Third Air Force, United States Air Forces in Europe.

General Griswold will be succeeded in the Munitions Board assignment by Maj. Gen. Frederick R. Dent, jr., until recently Commanding General of the Wright Air Development Center.

Brig. Gen. Paul E. Ruestow, Assistant for Materiel Program Control, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel, USAF, has been named Commanding General, Far East Air Materiel Command, replacing Brig. Gen. John P. Doyle.

General Doyle will become Director of Transportation, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel, to replace Major General William E. Farthing. General Farthing is scheduled to retire in August when he will reach the mandatory retirement age of 60.

General Ruestow will be replaced by Brig. Gen. Thomas B. McDonald, now Commanding General of the Middletown Air Materiel Area, Olmsted AFB, Middletown, Pa. He will be replaced by Maj. Gen. Lyman P. Whitten, as announced 4 Feb.

Generals Ruestow and Griswold are being reassigned in accordance with the policy of limiting service at Headquarters, USAF, to a four-year period.

Air Depot C.O. Retires

Col. Park Holland, commanding officer of Erding Air Depot, Germany, retired on 31 March after 34 years of active service.

Impressive ceremonies at the air depot he commanded for the past four and a half years marked Colonel Holland's retirement. Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, USAF, Commander-in-Chief of U. S. Air Forces in Europe, headed the group of high ranking Air Force officers who attended the ceremonies.

General Norstad decorated Colonel Holland with the Legion of Merit—his second—for his work at Erding and paid tribute to his "long, distinguished and devoted Air Force career."

Colonel Holland officially turned over the command of the depot to Col. Ben I. Funk during the ceremonies. Colonel Funk had been the deputy commander of the depot.

Colonel Holland enlisted in what was then the Aviation Section of the Army Signal Corps on 1 June 1918. A professional attorney, he specialized in military law during his Air Force career, and defended more men in courts martial than any other officer in the Air Force.

He celebrated his 60th birthday on 2 March, which made his retirement from the Air Force mandatory.

On the reviewing stand with Colonel Holland, General Norstad and Colonel Funk were Maj. Gen. Truman H. Landon, Deputy Commander of USAFE, Maj. Gen. Dean C. Strother, Commanding General of the 12th Air Force; Maj. Gen. Alden Crawford, USAFE Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel; Brig. Gen. Joseph C. A. Denniston, USAFE Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel, and other staff officers and commanders of the principal Air Force units in Germany.

Over 4,000 companies, large and small, supply parts and materials to one of the big jet engine manufacturers, reports the Aircraft Industries Association.

Industry Advisory Board

The Industry and Educational Advisory Board of the Air Force held a meeting at Baltimore, Md., last week with Air Research and Development Command personnel.

This was the eighth meeting of the Advisory Board, appointed by the Chief of Staff, USAF, for the purpose of advising on the facilities requirements and operation of the Air Research and Development Command's Arnold Engineering Development Center at Tullahoma, Tenn., now in the process of construction.

Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, USAF, commanding general of the Air Research and Development Command, and key members of his staff briefed Advisory Board members on the overall ARDC program. Also outlined in these presentations were the functions assigned to the eight ARDC Centers to make possible accomplishment of the Command program.

Presentations were also made by Col. C. K. Moore, commanding officer of the Arnold Engineering Development Center, and representatives of ARO, Inc., which is in charge of operating AEDC.

Members of the Advisory Board are: Professor J. R. Markham, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, chairman.

Dr. C. E. Brehm, President, University of Tennessee.

Maj. Gen. E. M. Powers (Ret.), Vice President and Director of Engineering, Curtiss-Wright Aircraft.

Mr. W. A. Parkins, Engineering Manager, Pratt & Whitney Aircraft Corp.

Mr. A. T. Colwell, Vice President, Thompson Products, Inc.

Dr. Simon Ramo, Director, Guided Missile Division, Hughes Aircraft Co.

Mr. R. G. Bowman, Chief, Engineering, Republic Aircraft.

Honor Air Surgeon

In appreciation for the excellent work he performed while serving as Tenth Air Force Surgeon from Sept. 1950 to Oct. 1951, Dr. Richard D. Mudd, General Motors Industrial Surgeon for the past 12 years and an Air Force Colonel, has been awarded the Commendation Ribbon. Maj. Gen. Harry A. Johnson, USAF, commanding general of the Tenth Air Force, presented the ribbon to Colonel Mudd during ceremonies 6 April, at Selfridge AFB, Mich.

The citation credits the Colonel for his ingenious planning, initiative and devotion to duty, during the crucial mobilization period from Sept. 1950 to Oct. 1951. The award is in addition to a similar meritorious award during WW II, when as Air Surgeon of the San Antonio Air Service Command he received the Legion of Merit. Colonel Mudd is now serving as Commanding Officer of the 929th Medical Group of the 929th Reserve Training Wing at Selfridge.

Born in Washington, D. C., in 1901, he is the son of Dr. Thomas D. Mudd, and grandson of Dr. Samuel A. Mudd, the physician who set the leg of John Wilkes Booth, assassin of President Lincoln.

The Colonel was married to the former Rose M. Krummack of Ravenna, Nebraska, in 1928 and has seven children. They reside at 1001 Hoyt Street, Saginaw, Mich.

Col. Murphy USAF A.G.

Col. Vance E. Murphy, formerly Adjutant General with the Tenth Air Force, Selfridge AFB, Mich., has assumed duties as Adjutant General of U. S. Air Force Europe. He succeeds Col. Harry W. Craig.

Per Diem Decision

In the case of Lt. Col. Arthur T. Cameron, USAF, who requested reconsideration of an adverse decision of the Comptroller General who had ruled that the officer was not entitled to a per diem while on duty at Headquarters, Alaskan Air Command, inasmuch as messing facilities were available there, the Comptroller General repeated in B-103602, his ruling and directed that the illegal per diem payments made to the officer should be refunded to the government.

The official digest of the ruling follows:

"The per diem station allowance, authorized under regulations and circulars of the uniformed services for personnel who perform duty outside the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, may not be paid to an officer for a period during which Government quarters and messing facilities were available at his post of duty, and a commanding officer may not by denying or purporting to deny an officer permission to eat meals at an otherwise available organization mess confer on the officer a vested legal right to said per diem station allowance."

Safety Council Honors USAF

For the second consecutive year and the fourth time in eight years, the National Safety Council has presented its highest award to the Air Force.

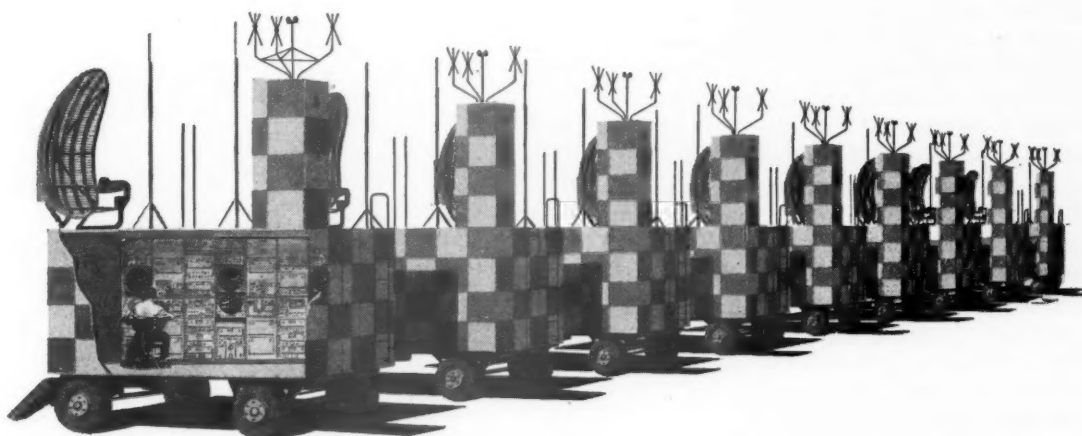

The "Award of Honor," for an average

5.2 per cent reduction in the Air Force ground accident rate in 1951, was presented to General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, by Ned H. Dearborn, National Safety Council President. During 1951, there was a total reduction of approximately 20 per cent in the injury rate of Air Force personnel.

POST WAR DEVELOPMENTS

Of the 274 major items under Signal Corps procurement in 1951, 250 of them were post-World War II developments.

"The government has a responsibility to the men whom it calls to the Service, takes away from their families and removes from the normal opportunities to earn a living and to provide for their wives and children. I am convinced that in order to discharge this obligation, the Federal government must find a way to assure maternity and infant care to the wives and infants, and hospital care to all dependents of Servicemen."—SENATOR HERBERT H. LEHMAN.

Stretching the Stretch-out. In its determination to economize on National Defense, the House of Representatives seems to have acted more with haste than wisdom. They have gone home for the holidays and left an appropriation bill that:

- Puts a ceiling of $46 billion on next year's defense expenditures—$6.5 billion below that contemplated under the Administration's "stretch-out" plan. This means, Subcommittee Chairman McMahon warned, that some of the planes, tanks, and guided-missiles contracted for and expected to be delivered next year will have to be deferred while overhead expenses go on.

- Leaves only $20,000,000 of new money for research and development instead of the $60,000,000 sought in the Budget. Thus there will be a strangling at the source of the basic knowledge upon which future progress can be made in weapons and equipment. This threatens that superiority of weapons upon which we must depend to off-set the vastly greater manpower of the Communist world.

- Takes $130,000,000 from the Air Force's fund for the protective radar screen around the United States—the money from which its electronic equipment, communications between outlying stations and bases, and the maintenance of isolated weather stations is supported. This could well cripple the basic foundation of the defenses of our homeland against aerial attack.

- Denies the Navy funds for initial work on the second 60,000-ton carrier upon which its plans for future effectiveness are based.

- Slices nearly $2 billion from the Army (more than from any of the other Services) at a time when it is at death grips with ruthless enemies in Korea and attempting to fulfill its obligations in Europe.

Matters affecting the welfare and morale of Service personnel took a particular beating. Ceilings were put on grades to the extent of amounting almost to a promotion freeze. Travel pay for temporary duty was eliminated. The amount of household goods which may be transported when official orders require Service families to move their homes was curtailed.

While rushing these cuts through the House before the Easter Holidays, the conference which is holding up final determination on and enactment of the Service cost-of-living pay increase was left over until after the holidays.

What motivated the members to tramp down so hard on the National Defense? The coming elections and the desire to balance the budget at any cost may have had its influence. The increasing talk of an early truce in Korea and Stalin's well timed attitude of "speaking softly" could have played a part. The recent widely publicized investigations and charges of waste in Defense spending undoubtedly influenced many members. Or, again, there could be a growing spirit of anti-militarism such as that expressed on the floor by Representative Frederic R. Coudert, jr. (R-NY), one of the backers of an over-all blanket cut, who dramatically announced

SATURDAY, 12 APRIL 1952

"It is no longer true that the hand that rules the Pentagon, rules the nation." Regardless of what the cause may have been, it is evident that these cuts, if allowed to stand, will be damaging to the National Defense and that they may well jeopardize our policy of peace through strength. There would be little solace in a balanced budget if it put us at the mercy of predatory nations.

The Nation must look to the Senate to lessen the threats in the House bill. Theirs is a great responsibility to the future.

Promotion Freeze

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Representative Davis is to be congratulated. I think his attack on the officers in the Armed Forces (restriction on promotions) has been as destructive of their morale as any in the past six or seven years. This is especially noteworthy in that there have been so many other members of Congress who have done their bit to this end. It would almost seem that Congress is discouraging us from trying to make a career of the military. Every session some member comes up with a new little joker but this is by far the neatest I have seen yet.

Some of us (several thousand on the Army eligibility lists) have been sitting around for some six to eight years in grade and have had the door shut in our faces by only as much as six days or six weeks or six months. But even so we had hope with the everlasting announcements that promotions would be resumed from the lists "right after the first of the year" or "early in the spring" or "before the end of the fiscal year" or "by late fall." Now up rises Representative Davis with his clever idea which would result not only in cutting those of us who haven't made it but by reducing others.

What was particularly astute about the scheme now proposed was or is the percentage ratio to total strength down to the fifth decimal place. Just where did these magic figures come from. Just what is the basis for them. Certainly he didn't dig into civil service records and get a corresponding ratio for GS ratings. Of course if the Department of the Army would stop calling field grade officers to active duty and then release immediately all those previously called since Korea the problem could be easily solved. And to hear these recalls talk they feel that they have been discriminated against anyway.

While on this subject, about which many of us are most interested, I would like to refer to the amusing line of reasoning presented by a writer in a Reserve publication. He says it would not be fair to promote on the "best qualified" basis because the amount of time on active service would be a strong influence. He isn't seriously recommending that this shouldn't be a factor, I trust. Is he saying that the only criteria should be age rather than "military" experience. He should know that the "lion's share" of promotions have not gone to regulars but to reserves who stayed on after the war. The figures released last fall indicated that the ratio of promotions was almost perfectly in line with ratio of reserves to regulars on duty in June, 1950.

No doubt the Army will be afraid to go on with promotions in the face of this rider but it was fun thinking there was a chance anyway.

CAPTAIN, RA

Kicking the Services Around

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

When you publish such excellent editorials as "Squeezing the Services" (5 April issue) and "A Study in

"The Services Help Their Own." The 1952 joint fund campaign of the Army Emergency Relief and Army Relief Society gets underway this month. The annual Navy Relief Ball will be held in the Sail Loft of the Navy Yard, Washington, D. C., on 23 May. As in past years, the annual fund drive of the Air Force Aid Society most likely will be conducted the last week in July and the first week in August.

The good work these organizations perform throughout the year well merits the fine support the Services have given them in their past fund drives. Because they are really part of the Armed Forces themselves, they can do more for needy Service cases, and do it faster and with less investigation and reporting, than can be done by civilian relief organizations. Life in the Armed Forces is subject to its special kinds of emergencies and hardships which are readily understood and cared for by these organizations of Service people.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Fresh Japanese troops are continuing their forward drive in Bataan. A heavy attack on our new position is now in progress.

50 Years Ago—

There are no military operations worthy of the name anywhere in the Philippine Archipelago except in the Luzon provinces of Batangas, Laguna, Tayabas and Cavite, and in these the insurgent resistance is steadily declining.

85 Years Ago—

By the extraordinary vote of 31 to 2, the Senate has confirmed the Seward-Stoeckl treaty; and so Russian America passes to the possession of the Republic. The discussion of the treaty was calm, deliberate, candid and exhaustive.

Figures" (29 March) why don't you give them for publication in some of the big city papers? We in the Services know the things you write of, but the civilian people do not realize that the Armed Forces come under a separate category and are not entitled to the Federal pay raise passed retroactively to 1 July 1951.

The Senators and Congressmen know that the different states make voting almost impossible for the majority of Service people, and that we, therefore, can be kicked around because we have no lobby or organized organizations to insist on equally fair play for all Federal employees, military and civilian alike.

Saving at Soldier's Expense

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

With so many Senators running for President, no wonder we are having trouble with a pay bill for the Services!

You would think from all the investigations that Congress would have learned by now that the Service pay bill is not the most intelligent place to effect savings.

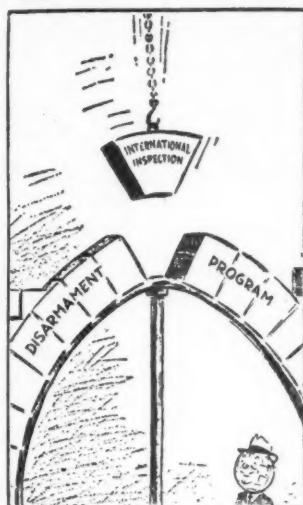

What makes them think that the man with the most children is necessarily superior as a soldier? This cost-of-living pay is a farce—name one thing, except GI pay, that isn't up. It takes all our pay to exist—not live. In September of 1949 we had $1,500 saved; now we have less than $50.

WIFE OF AN OLD TIME M./SGT.

Editorial comment on the U. S. proposal for world disarmament centers largely around the importance of international inspection to the overall plan. Most papers agree that disarmament would not work without some system of inspection, and these views have been summed up by one paper which remarked that it would be like "buying a disarmament pig in a poke" which "would mean nothing but increased world peril."

The Burlington (Vt) Free Press declares: "Obviously there is little hope of disarmament until such time as there is definite information as to what the various nations have in the way of armaments. Only then is there any basis on which to determine how the reductions shall be made."

America's leading Socialist, Norman Thomas, writing in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post, says there is need for unrelenting American advocacy of world disarmament and that it must be presented "so that it appeals to men as a holy crusade." The Post declared in a foreword that it is "most emphatically" in agreement.

"The Keystone"
Carmack in The Christian Science Monitor

Commenting on Mr. Thomas' article, The Detroit News states, "Like this newspaper, he would prefer to mere reduction of armaments a proposal to abolish them, leaving to each nation only the police weapons required for maintaining domestic order." The News said it "long has agreed" with Mr. Thomas' statement that disarmament must be seen as "our one hope for peace."

The Philadelphia Inquirer thinks the U. S. plan is an elaborate and searching program "but decidedly not one in which the United States could participate without the most complete assurances that international inspections to prevent hidden development of arms, particularly atomic weapons, would be carried out permanently."

Somewhat more cynical, the Los Angeles Times says the disarmament debate "apparently has come to a complete stall at the nadir of futility, neither camp really entertaining any hope their proposals will be accepted and both wishing to appear the frustrated world champion of peace."

Hope for Truce Persists

REPORTS persist in Washington and Korea that there is some possibility of reaching an agreement to end hostilities in the Korean War within the next few weeks. There appear to be no solid developments to justify such reports, but the Communists have vaguely intimated that they may be ready to recede from positions previously taken and to accept a compromise on major issues now preventing a settlement.

The Red delegates to the Panmunjom truce conference have indicated their wish to combine, for purposes of discussion, their demands that Russia be made a member of the international truce supervision team and that the Communists be allowed to rebuild military airfields in North Korea during the proposed armistice. The Allies have rejected both of these proposals, but there is a hint in the Red suggestion for joint treatment of these issues that the Communists may be willing to withdraw their nomination of Russia as a truce supervisor, provided the Allies permit them to rebuild airfields. United Nations representatives have rejected in advance any such trade. They take the position that the Reds proposed that Russia be included in the truce supervision arrangement solely for the purpose of having something to exchange for a major Allied concession.

Communist concessions in connection with exchange of prisoners of war are also rumored. Heretofore the Reds have insisted on the forcible return of all captured soldiers, regardless of their personal wishes. The Allies declare that repatriation must be voluntary. This week the Red radio pledged that all returned prisoners would be well treated, and that there would be no reprisals, even against those who renounced Communism while in Allied prison camps. This is regarded as a possible preliminary move to a change of position on involuntary repatriation. It has been suggested that the Reds might be willing to base prisoner exchanges on revised lists, omitting the names of those who do not wish to return, the latter being treated as refugees, rather than war prisoners. Such procedure, if adopted, would have the effect of exchanging only those prisoners who wish to return, and in addition would serve as a face-saving formula for the Reds, a circumstance of great importance to the Oriental mind.

THE RESERVED OPTIMISM IN KOREA as to peace prospects was reflected by General Omar N. Bradley, USA, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who expressed hope for a peaceful settlement of the Korean War in a speech at Macon, Ga. He characterized as absurd the Red demand that Russia be chosen to help police the proposed Korean armistice. The general said that if the Soviet Union had not provided the Reds with modern military equipment the war in Korea would never have been possible.

Though the Communists indicated a more favorable attitude toward an early Korean truce their propaganda machine continued its virulent attack on the Allies, repeating over the radio and in Red newspapers the baseless charges that United Nations planes were dropping bombs laden with germ-carrying insects to cause widespread plague epidemics throughout North Korea and parts of China. To bolster these accusations the Reds published pictures of bombs reported to have been used in spreading germs and also of insects alleged to have been infected with disease-bearing bacilli. The bombs shown were those used to carry propaganda leaflets and the insects depicted were types usually found around trash heaps. Eminent medical authorities in the United States and other countries who examined the pictures were unanimous in characterizing them as clumsy and unscientific attempts to deceive uninformed readers.

ONE LEADING COMMUNIST SCIENTIST, Dr. Frederic Joliot-Curie, of France, however, supported the Red charges. He wrote to Ambassador Warren R. Austin, head of the United States delegation to the United Nations, protesting the employment of germ warfare, and received a scathing reply. Mr. Austin called on Dr. Joliot-Curie to support the Allied demand for an on-the-spot investigation of the Red accusations, and to endorse the offer of the World Health Organization to help wipe out any disease epidemics there may be in North Korea and China.

The French this week announced the successful completion of their campaign to clear the vital Red River delta area in Indo-China of the last of the Communist-led Viet Minh rebels. They claim to have killed 1,590 Reds and to have captured 1,803 in the last two weeks. Remnants of a five-battalion Communist force trapped in a pocket along the shore of Tonkin Gulf dumped guns and ammunition into the sea and fled into the hills, where they are now being hunted.

THE SOVIET UNION this week continued its recent peace offensive through the medium of an interview of Prime Minister Joseph Stalin by the Indian ambassador at Moscow. After the conversation the Indian envoy urged a meeting of the world's "top people" to attempt to settle major international problems. Heads of the western powers quickly indicated that they were rather cool to the proposal, taking the position that there was ample opportunity for Russia to show by deeds, rather than words, a sincere desire for peace.

Taken in connection with other recent gestures from the Kremlin this latest move is regarded as another effort to disrupt the Atlantic Union, the growing strength of which is undoubtedly causing Moscow considerable concern. Also it may have been timed to lull the American Congress into a sense of security that might be reflected in reduced appropriations for national defense and foreign aid.

Another evidence of a change of tactics on the part of Russia is the sponsorship of the International Economic Conference now in session in Moscow, at which Soviet leaders announced that their country and other Communist countries were ready for a vast expansion of trade with the non-Communist world. This peace maneuver attracted only relatively few left-wing unofficial representatives of western nations. During the conference an informal arrangement was made by some British importers and representatives of Red China for the exchange of $28 million in goods.

BOLIVIA WAS ROCKED by a military insurrection this week, with a sudden revolt by the followers of Victor Paz Estenssoro, exiled leader of the National Revolutionary party. Estenssoro was a candidate for president at the election last May. He received more votes than any other candidate, but because he failed to obtain a clear majority the Bolivian Congress was scheduled to select the president. Before it could act a military junta, headed by Gen. Hugo Ballivian seized control and Estenssoro fled to Argentina. It is against this junta that the current revolt is directed. It is led by Brig. Gen. Antonio Seleme, Secretary of the Interior, who turned against the government. At first the insurrection appeared to be successful, but late this week military units loyal to Gen. Ballivian were reported to be gaining the upper hand.

NATO Command Post Exercise

MORE than 200 general officers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization took part this week in a command-post exercise ordered by General Eisenhower and set up by his deputy, Field Marshal Montgomery. No troop formations were deployed save hypothetically, but the exercise provided a test of plans and planners and also of prospective field commanders from each of the nations involved in the defense of western Europe.

Timing their activities with those of the new American Ambassador to Spain, Lincoln MacVeagh, members of the new military mission (Maj. Gen. August C. Kissner, USAF, Maj. Gen. Crump Garvin, USA, and Capt. H. G. Sanchez, USN, heading its respective service elements) have begun preparation of the detailed program for such aid to Spain as will be of potential aid to the United States. It should also be of conspicuous aid to the Atlantic Treaty nations in general, but on this aspect there is very little public expression, owing to determined anti-Franco views in Britain and France. The Congressional grant of $100,000,000 is to be bestowed somehow, and while it obviously must be in forms acceptable to Spain itself, it is assumed that it will be so expended as to contribute materially to a military potential advantageous to the west.

We have been almost five years in getting this far. It was Vice Adm. Richard L. Conolly (when he took over from Admiral Hewitt the 4-star post in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean) who, in 1947, advocated a renewal of relations with Spain in the interests of his own command. In 1949 he finally gained permission to pay a formal visit with six of his ships (the first since long before World War II) and thereafter called several times upon General Franco.

In July 1951 the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, then Chief of Naval Operations, in what was almost his last official labor, visited Spain and conducted some "exploratory conversations" which led, on 18 July of that year, to an impressive clarification of American policy by Secretary of State Acheson; it referred to the recent discussions of what Spain might be willing and able to do toward strengthening the western defense against aggression, and made it clear that this was an American enterprise only, with no participation by Britain or France. It is unchanged to this day, and it is necessary to bear in mind that current conversations bear the blessing of Mutual Security and not of NATO.

The Sherman visit was quickly followed (in August 1951) by dispatch of a military survey team (Maj. Gen. James W. Spry, USAF, Brig. Gen. Samuel G. Conley, USA, Rear Adm. Robert L. Campbell, Jr., USN, and others) instructed to judge what Spain could offer to our advantage, and what Spain would herself need. That team's report made possible the instructions to the present Kissner mission, now performing the next phase of this involved work.

The circumstance that an Air Force general heads the second group, like the first, points to the larger interest of that service in any prospective arrangement. It has been presumed from the start that, aside from certain extremely valuable ports and anchorages (notably near Cape Ferrol) which obviously would interest the Navy for several reasons, Spain's prime value would be to American air elements. With assured staging bases and supply points in Spain it is obvious the Air Force could add greatly to its combat effectiveness, both for flights over European targets and for antisubmarine patrols keeping clear the western part of the Mediterranean and the ocean approaches to the straits. The necessity of seaports (but not naval bases) close to those air bases, and of connecting roads for the bringing in of seaborne supplies is apparent. But the Navy itself would benefit impressively from the opportunity to familiarize skippers with those coastal waters, and as the practice is to rotate ships and personnel alike in and out of the Mediterranean fleet, addition of Spanish ports to the regular routine would be of advantage to a great many ship's captains. The reports both of Ambassador MacVeagh and of the military mission will be of lively interest.

Premier Antoine Pinay this week won in the French Parliament an impressive series of confidence votes on ten bills related to his new financial program. Support came from elements in the Gaullist and Popular Republican groups, enabling France's new rightist government to proceed with measures its predecessor had failed in. France breathes a little more easily also over events south of the Mediterranean. The Bey of Tunis has named a new pro-French cabinet, replacing the Nationalist office-holders who, with 1,000 of their militant sup-

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Russia's Atomic Bombs—A current Air Force publication contains an intriguing article titled "How Many Atomic Bombs Does Russia Have?"

The article is published in Air Training, slick, new magazine of the Air Training Command. The information, says an explanatory note, "is based on the translation of a Norwegian document written by a Dr. Louis Nagy, about whom there is no available information. The material is unclassified. Although its authenticity is not known, the translation was released by Air Forces Intelligence for 'dissemination.'"

The article states that "Russia now has enough atomic bombs to cause terrible destruction over large areas, but not enough to strike a really decisive blow to the Allies."

"Producing two atomic bombs per month, Russia began in 1951 with a supply of 22 atomic bombs and should have had 46 at the end of the year," the article continues. "These are not enough to win a war."

According to Dr. Nagy's report, as contained in the Air Force publication, "In June 1947 the Soviet Union for the first time tested an atomic bomb in a remote part of Siberia about 45 miles from Lake Baikal. This was only a small experiment," the report continues. "The explosion was noted within a radius of about 20 miles, but could not be registered by observatories outside the Soviet Union."

The article concludes with the statement that "from the over-all look of things, the Soviet Union does not now seem to have the capacity to deliver a decisive and crippling atomic bomb attack upon the United States and Western Europe."

Skychasers—The team of U. S. Air Force jet pilots whose exhibitions of precision formation flying with their Thunderjet F-84's have made them known all over Europe, are the subject of a special article in this week's Collier's magazine. The pilots are Maj. Harry K. Evans, Captains Cuthbert A. and Charles C. Pattillo (twins), Capt. Lawrence D. Damewood, and Capt. John O'Brien, all of whom are stationed at Furstenfeldbruck, Germany, with the 36th Fighter-Bomber Wing. Their exhibitions, the article by Seymour Freidin and Bill Richardson states, have done much to demonstrate to Europeans the high quality and capabilities of American aircraft.

New British Marine Commandant—Maj. Gen. H. T. Tollemache of the British Royal Marines will be promoted to lieutenant general next month and become Commandant-General of the Royal Marines, succeeding General Sir Leslie Hollis.

General Tollemache is presently Commander of the Portsmouth Group, Royal Marines. During World War I, he served in the Grand Fleet and later with the 12th Battalion, Royal Marines in China. In World War II, he held commands in the Mobile Naval Base Defence Organization, and was Commander of a Special Operations Group which carried out small-scale raids against the Japanese.

New Army "Division Slice"—There may be a new kind of division slice following field tests at Ft. Lee, Va., the Army's Quartermaster Center. At present, bread slices are nine-sixteenths of an inch thick. The studies will determine whether a thinner or thicker slice will please the soldiers and serve economy better.

Jim Farley is Quartermaster Veep—The Quartermaster Association has a new Vice President in the person of former Postmaster General James A. Farley. Chairman of the Democratic National Committee for many years, Mr. Farley is currently a vice president of the National Democratic Club of New York. He is also Chairman of the Board of the Coca-Cola Export Corporation.

RAF Receives Super Priority—The British Prime Minister, Winston Churchill, has advised the Parliament that Britain's first defense need "is the rearming of the RAF with weapons worthy of their daring and skill." To this end, he said "I have directed that super-priority should be given to the production of the latest and best types of fighter aircraft."

Mr. Churchill said Britain's air power has caused him much anxiety. "Deliveries of modern aircraft are seriously behind the original programme," he said, and as a result, "the RAF, though maintaining its size, is not being re-equipped with modern machines as rapidly as it should be."

He pointed out that Britain has "no swept-back-wing fighters in service, such as the American F-86 and the Russian MIG-15," a fact which would be "unfortunate . . . if war should come at a moment when the enemy has a great advantage in modernity." He said it was not a good arrangement "to have the highest class of air pilots and all the personal staffs required and for them to have only second-best weapons to fight with."

The "greatest need" for the armed services, he said, "is for modern aircraft in the squadrons."

Navy Tests New Underwater Device—SOFAR, a new sound fixing and ranging device which allows underwater sounds to be picked up more than three thousand miles away, has joined the Navy ranks along with SONAR and RADAR.

Perfected by Dr. Maurice Ewing of Columbia University while he was doing research on submarine detecting methods under Navy contract, the device is now being tested in the Pacific and the Navy said it "may be adopted for search and rescue operations."

If SOFAR is used for this purpose, the Navy said it would equip liferafts and aircraft with small bombs which would be dropped overboard, sink to proper water depths and explode, releasing sound waves which would be picked up by SOFAR stations. Positions of the craft would be determined by triangulation.

Three Navies To Use New Catapult—The new British steam-driven catapult which is being tested by the U. S. Navy for possible use aboard the new 60,000-ton carrier Forrestal, has proved so satisfactory to the British that it has been definitely accepted for use on British, Australian and Canadian carriers.

The First Lord of the British Admiralty, J. P. L. Thomas, has disclosed to Parliament that the new catapult is "capable of launching the most modern carrier-borne aircraft" and that trials conducted in both England and the United States have proved "highly satisfactory." He said, "This new apparatus will be installed for operational use in carriers of the Royal Navy, the Royal Australian Navy and the Royal Canadian Navy." When the steam catapult has been fitted, he said, it "will enable carriers to operate the future heavier and faster types of aircraft."

Although the whole project is highly classified, Mr. Thomas left the impression

Extend War Provisions—The Senate and House approved and sent to the President on 10 April a joint resolution extending until 1 July 1952 those emergency provisions which otherwise would terminate with the approval of the treaty with Japan.

Included in the statutes concerned are many affecting the Services and the power to appoint and extend commissions and warrants in the Armed Services and their Reserve components. However, unless further action is taken before July these emergency provisions will terminate automatically.

Study Russian Tractors—Two Russian track-type tractors, captured in Korea, have been evaluated under a Corps of Engineers contract and have been found to bear a close resemblance to the U. S. Army's D-7 tractors built by the Caterpillar Tractor Company, Peoria, Ill.

The Caterpillar firm carried out the evaluation and investigation contract under direction of the Engineer Research and Development Laboratories, Fort Belvoir, Va. The studies show that Russian engineers have copied the fuel injection system, air cleaner and starting engine from the D-7 model. Tests also were made to determine the pulling power and operational qualities of the machine.

Damaged by gun fire, the two tractors were dismantled to combine parts of both to assemble one in running condition.

The Russian machines also will be studied to determine the possibility of restoring captured equipment to working order in the field by replacing worn and damaged Russian parts with American parts, the Army said.

Leadership demands constant achievement

Nearly every science known to man ...

insures dependability and advanced design in Lockheed planes

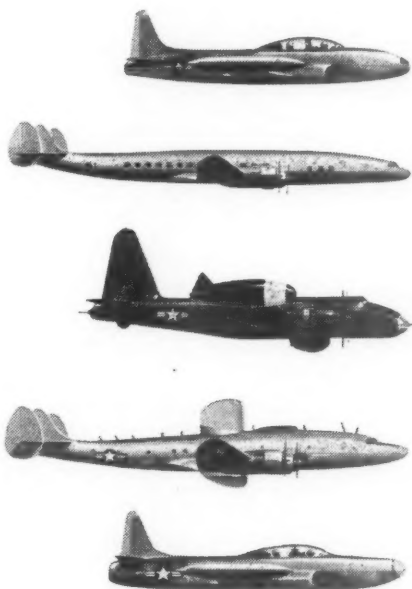

AIRCRAFT DESIGNING and construction are precise sciences. That's why Lockheed Engineering has more departments than a big university.

Lockheed's several thousand scientist-engineers work on more than 150 major projects—to build the utmost precision and dependability into Lockheed aircraft.

LOCKHEED'S ENGINEERS must have all the right answers for each vital part of every airplane. Will it stand heat, cold, tropical damp, corrosion, sand, dust, stress, strain, torque—and exactly how much? Can it be made lighter, stronger, smaller, simpler, more economical, better in any way? If the right metal doesn't exist, Lockheed scientists develop one. If a new machine is needed, Lockheed engineers invent one. There's always a new problem, because Lockheed is always looking for a better method—always building better aircraft.

TRAINING FOR SCIENTIST-ENGINEERS For information about Lockheed's on-job training, write: Engineering Section, Employment Dept., Lockheed, Burbank, Calif.

House Gives Three Days' Debate to Cuts in National Defense Funds

been used as a basis for making firm contracts for long lead time items. This money is not available to the Services for operating expenses or for placing orders for additional items, he emphasized.

Congressman Mahon explained that in fiscal year 1951 expenditures for defense were $19 billion, compared with about $40 billion this fiscal year and an estimated $52 billion next year.

Recruiting Questioned

Representative Paul C. Jones (D-Mo.), questioned the need for continuation of recruiting. He said he was not satisfied with the $2 million reduction in Army recruiting recommended by the Committee. He suggested that most of the men who are recruited volunteer "when they find that Selective Service is breathing down their necks."

Representative Robert L. F. Sikes (D-Fla.), who was in charge of the Army appropriations subcommittee, said "it is true enough that the draft service could secure all of the people we need if there were no recruiting facilities, but the recruiting is beamed at men for long-term enlistment and career men. We cannot build an effective force with two-year draftees," he said.

Five-Star Officer Staffs

Early in the debate, Representative Mahon explained why the Committee voted to eliminate funds to pay military personnel for assignment to inactive five-star officers. "This was no attempt . . . to embarrass anyone or try to discredit our heroes, who have performed so nobly in behalf of the country," he said. "The reduction was made . . . out of a realization of the fact that if we are going to have economy we have got to make reductions in small items as well as in large items."

Mr. Taber Speaks

After about an hour's discussion led by Congressman Mahon, the floor was given to Representative John Taber (R-N. Y.), ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee. He protested against the methods used in presenting the budget to the Committee and said "this whole military picture needs revamping from a budget standpoint so that these people will be made to justify the items in some intelligent way so that we can compare their operations with what has gone before."

Congressman Taber said additional cuts were possible in the budget, but he did not point to any specific items.

Navy Cuts Explained

The chairman of the Navy appropriations subcommittee, Representative Harry R. Sheppard (D-Calif.), was recognized to explain the action taken in reducing the Navy budget from $13.8 billion to $12.8 billion.

"I think the cuts are too big," he declared.

Among other results of the cut, he mentioned the necessity of eliminating two of the three fleet training centers planned for fiscal year 1953, and reducing Navy recruiting by 20 per cent, cutting by 50 per cent the number of officers receiving schooling in civilian institutions. He said this latter reduction "is serious and will radically disrupt the orderly postgraduate program. Many officers now attending postgraduate schools," said Representative Sheppard, "are taking two-year courses."

Marine Corps Reductions

The House was informed that the Committee had also cut postgraduate training for Marine Corps officers in half, and had reduced procurement of ammunition, weapons, guided missiles and equipment by $400 million. The three Marine divisions "will be below the requirements for a three-month combat consumption," Mr. Sheppard reported.

Naval Aviation

It was stated that during fiscal year 1952, naval aviation increased its operating aircraft by 2,000 and activated six additional air stations which required delaying procurement of necessary parts and equipment. A cut of $75 million in aircraft and facilities funds for the Navy "will further aggravate this condition," and will result "in placing aircraft out of commission due to lack of spare parts in fiscal year 1953 and fiscal year 1954," Congressman Sheppard observed.

A $150 million cut in funds for construction of Naval aircraft and related procurement, reported Mr. Sheppard, was made despite the fact that, prior to the reduction, the aircraft procurement program covered 2,776 planes which failed by 800 to modernize the Navy's operating aircraft by December 1954.

Carrier Cut A Mistake

Questioned about the elimination of the second super-carrier in the Navy budget, Mr. Sheppard said he thought this was "definitely" a mistake. He stated that "further modernization of World War II carriers will no longer keep them abreast of future requirements" for the following seven reasons.

"First, the weight of the aircraft has been increased because of the increased fuel consumption which requires larger fuel capacity on those planes.

"Second, our consumption of aviation fuel requires increased carrier, navigation fuel capacity on each one of those flat-tops, if we are to use them with the modern requirements.

"Third, increased weights of jet aircraft require excessive deck run or catapulting of the aircraft. Neither deck lengths nor number of catapults can be further increased in World War II carriers. We have reached the maximum on depth of our runways on those ships, and we cannot go beyond that unless they put an annex on the ship, and that is not being done.

"Fourth, increased bomb and rocket loads on new planes require increased storage facilities on aircraft carriers.

"Fifth, the increased size of aircraft requires larger storage facilities. At least one-half of the aircraft should be capable of being stowed on the hangar deck for most efficient operations. Modern carriers carry over 100 operating aircraft.

"Sixth, jet aircraft operate at higher landing speeds and, even without the use of arresting gear, more space for landing is required in this type of operation.

"Seventh, better protection for the carrier is required from torpedoes, bombs, and other damage. The new carrier permits armored steel flight decks and greatly improved underwater protection."

Charges of Waste

Following Representative Sheppard's remarks, the floor was given to Representative Richard B. Wigglesworth (R-Mass.), a long-time member of the Appropriations Committee. He referred continually to charges of waste in the defense program and said that the Chairman of the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board lack adequate authority.

Describes Percentage Cuts

Representative Wigglesworth noted that the Committee had cut the defense budget 8.3 per cent—the Army, 11 per cent, Navy, 7.25 per cent and the Air Force, approximately 7 per cent.

During his address, Congressman Wigglesworth complained that the bill had not received proper consideration and said "I can only hope that errors of commission or omission will be taken care of when the bill reaches the Senate."

An Appeal By Rep. Vinson

The next speaker was Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, who immediately described the military funds measure as "the most important bill the Congress will deal with during this session."

He warned against measuring the adequacy of the Nation's defense in terms of dollars and stated: "We must have defense irrespective of the cost." He cautioned against drifting back into the same position the nation's defenses were put prior to Korea.

Congressman Vinson said he had hoped originally that the defense budget might have been cut by $5-$6 billion. He said that if the Appropriations Committee said only a $4.2 billion reduction could be achieved, their recommendation must be supported.

Defense of the Military

Then, against a background of discussion which saw military leaders attacked repeatedly, Chairman Vinson made the following statement:

"In time of military crisis, the Congress and the Nation always turn to our military leaders to save the Nation. We open wide the Treasury doors, we hand them billions upon billions, we grease the legislative process and give them just about any legislation they ask for. We lionize them from coast to coast. We give them the greatest honors the country can bestow.

"Then they win the war.

"And then won it at vast cost of blood and treasure, much of which could have been saved and perhaps the war itself averted had the Nation followed their advice and been prepared. Then, just after the fighting stops, we begin to punish them for any miscalculations they may have made during the tremendous effort of the war.

"And then, very quickly, we begin to cut them down. We call them the brass, gluttons for power, empire builders. They become selfish nondescripts, in the public eye.

"And what follows? Why, then some begin to say that we know more about military matters than they do. And we take their estimates of military capabilities of potential enemies and say they do not know what they are talking about. We try to cut down the forces they insist are needed for national defense. We cut them so far back that within five years after every war in our history, the United States has been practically defenseless.

"Then, when the next war begins, we have to repeat the whole process. And again the military leaders, accustomed to operating without adequate funds or forces in peacetime, are given untold billions of dollars, millions of people, and almost all the authority they think they need to win the war.

"We have been backing and filling like this for 150 years.

"Yes, we ridicule them and ignore their views in time of peace.

"But in time of crisis, we have no hesitancy to follow their advice.

"Now, it seems to me that we may again be starting on that short-sighted perilous road again, if we aren't careful. The Joint Chiefs of Staff, our highest military men in the Nation, each of whom has had outstanding military records in the last war, have made firm representations as to what the Nation needs in today's world in order to provide an adequate defense for the American people. Let's not reduce this appropriation any further than it has already been cut by the committee."

Promotions Discussed

At the end of his remarks, Chairman Vinson announced his opposition to the Committee-approved amendment which would restrict officer promotions. This debate is covered in another article elsewhere in this issue.

Million Cut From NSRB

An amendment was introduced by Representative Bonner to cut funds for the National Security Resources Board from $1.5 million to $500,000. The NSRB already had been cut $280,000. Its activities were defended strongly by Representative Mahon, but nonetheless the amendment was adopted.

Eliminate NSTC

Next to face the economy drive was the National Security Training Commission. A request for $111,000 in the President's budget had been reduced by Committee action to $75,000.

Congressman Sheppard said that since the Universal Military Training Bill "has been quietly laid to rest . . . there is no reason why the $75,000 should be appropriated at this time.

Representative Vinson said UMT had been referred back to the Armed Services Committee "with instructions to further study it." He said "we are going to comply with the mandate of the House to study this matter and I am hoping that it can be brought back to the House at the very earliest opportunity for further consideration." He said funds for the Commission should not be taken away until UMT "has been settled one way or the other."

Despite the argument of Chairman Vinson, who said that the Commission should not be eliminated, even if the appropriation were only $25,000, the House agreed to the amendment.

The vote to kill the Commission is a pointed indication of the difficulties which would confront any new UMT legislation which may be asked by the Armed Services Committee.

Stalin Speaks Softly

Representative John W. McCormack (D-Mass.), majority leader, warned his colleagues that the next year would be a "crucial period." Taking note of recent utterances by Premier Stalin, timed some suspect to influence debate on appropriations, Representative McCormack said:

"When Stalin talks softly that is the time to be ever watchful and on our guard. It is also the time to increase our strength as rapidly as we can."

Representative Frederic R. Coudert (R-N.Y.), took exception to these remarks and said:

"Perhaps he (Rep. McCormack) thinks if he can throw a war scare and fear into us some more, we will abdicate our duties here, and we will cease to view this bill and this enormous appropriation with open eyes. Perhaps we will continue to blindly follow the self-interested judgment of the professional soldiers, who are obviously interested in large forces. The larger the forces the better off they are. The more soldiers in the Army, the more sailors in the Navy, the more generals, and the more admirals, the more stars and the more brass hats there will be."

Air Force Supply System

Charges made against the Air Force supply system the day before were refuted by Representative Overton Brooks (D-La.), a member of the Armed Services Committee. He said that while many people think the Air Force supply system came into being with the establishment of a separate Air Force in 1947, "the Air Force has had a most efficient system since 1917, when the first Air Supply Depot was established at Middletown, Ga."

Congressman Brooks continued: "It has proved both wise and economical for the Air Force to operate its own distributive channels, rather than to attempt to supply itself from one of the other services. This system now includes 16 general or major depots within the United States, plus many other specialized depots and the vast complex of installations overseas. More than a million items are stocked and distributed through the system.

"The development of this system over the years has not proceeded in opposition to the authorities of the Army and later the Secretary of Defense. We are led to believe by some that the system which the Air Force has operated over this long period of time has been achieved through some sort of connivance on the part of the Air Force and acquiescence by the other services. On the contrary, all of the supply activities have been in complete accord with national defense policies, including those laid down by the National Security Act."

Waste of Manpower

Representative Foster Furcolo (D-Mass.) said the greatest waste in military expenditures was in manpower. He charged that no one "in the entire world, in Government, business life, or any place else is as guilty of the great waste of manpower as our Armed Services."

He maintained that for Congress to get the answers it should call upon enlisted men and not the high-ranking officer. Said Mr. Furcolo:

"We talk about the empire builders and the fact a man wants to have a good many men under him so he will have a good job and he can hold four stripes instead of two and a half. That is not any enlisted man. He does not want any empire. All he wants is to get out. If you can get the enlisted man's confidence and guarantee his security is going to be protected, the everyday enlisted man will tell you where the waste of manpower is. High-ranking officers can tell us things the enlisted man cannot. They can help us places where the enlisted man cannot. But not on the question of waste of manpower."

Naval Aviation and Military Balance

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R-Mass.) was given the opportunity to address the House in support of additional funds for naval aviation. She said in part:

"I direct your attention to aviation—naval aviation and Air Force aviation. According to public information—it is not secret—the Air Force expects to have 143 airbases overseas and over 100 airbases in the United States by June 1953. This is a total of 243 airbases. These bases have been constructed at a cost of billions. To use these bases we have appropriated billions for airplanes and the Air Force has tripled in size. Now do not misunderstand me. I have not said, and will not say, this vast expansion of the Air Force was not necessary. I believe in air power. It is because of my confidence and belief in air power, both land-based and sea-based, that I now want to focus your attention on the sea-based air power of the United States. Sometimes we refer to it as carrier-based air power, and in the Navy it goes by the dignified title of naval aviation.

"How many carriers have we constructed since World War II? None. How many billions have we spent on carriers since the war? None. How many carriers have we authorized? Just two. Remember the great carrier—The United States? Its keel was laid when the great economic financiers of the Government decided to sink it. Based on costs today, this blundering decision cost this country the price of a new completed carrier. At present there is one carrier under construction. If we are to maintain this balance the generals were telling us was so essential to American security, then instead of one carrier under construction we should be building at least 50. Even then the Air Force would overwhelmingly weigh down its end of the scales. Carriers need replacement just as much as airbases, but certainly not as often. Improvements in aviation affect carriers just as they do airbases. Carriers must be able to meet the necessities of the hour just as much as airbases."

Transferability Amendment

An amendment was introduced by Representative Usher L. Burdick (R-N.D.) which would prohibit transfer of more than 10 per cent of any appropriation for another purpose. Representative Mahon said the amendment would defeat its own purpose, since no transferability is authorized at the present time.

The amendment was then altered by Representative Burdick to provide that there be no transferability. This amendment passed.

Dependent Travel

Representative Pat Sutton (D-Tenn.) questioned the policy of sending military dependents to Japan and Germany. He said:

"It is rather disturbing to me to see the wives and children going overseas to Japan, Europe, and other places. I say that for this reason: If we are in World War III or if we are fixing to go into World War III, why do we crucify these wives and children by sending them overseas? It is a great morale factor to the boys to have their families with them. That is one side of the question. But I would like to direct the attention of this committee to exactly what it is costing the taxpayers each year to send those families into those areas, so that you as a committee may investigate and find out whether we should send these families to foreign lands and take a chance on losing American citizens."

"During World Wars I and II, dependents were not sent overseas. I can see why we would send dependents to Panama Canal or South America, the Hawaiian Islands, or some place like that, but it is debatable whether we should send them to Japan or Europe."

Recruiting Funds Cut 75%

An amendment sponsored by Representative Paul C. Jones (D-Mo.) to cut funds for recruiting by 75 per cent from money spent in the current fiscal year was adopted. The vote was 72-58.

Army Maintenance

An amendment was introduced by Representative Leroy Johnson (R-Calif.) to cut funds for Army maintenance and operation from $4.5 billion to $4.3 billion. Said Mr. Johnson: "You cannot tell me that with a budget of over $4 billion the Army cannot squeeze out 1 per cent of that with efficient and economical operation."

At this point, debate on the appropriations bill for Tuesday was brought to a close.

On Wednesday, the proposed cut in Army funds was the first item of discussion. According to Representative George Meader (R-Mich.), the reduction "will not harm but help the Armed Services, the Army particularly, and encourage the military services to perform their necessary functions more efficiently."

Representative Sikes said that "if the House wants to cripple—and I said 'cripple'—if the House wants to cripple the Army this is a good place to do it." He pointed out that for maintenance and operation the Army had already been cut $300 million by the Appropriations Committee.

Mr. Sikes called for members of the House to point to specific places where there was fat in the budget. "Everybody says 'Cut the fat.' Where is it?" he asked.

Here again, economy won out over warnings by the Committee spokesmen and the House voted to cut the Army $136 million for maintenance and operation.

Army Stock Fund

Another amendment which was adopted—it was sponsored by Representative Bonner—eliminated $140 million for the Army Stock Fund. The vote in favor of the amendment was 106 to 62.

Funds for Carrier

Representative Rogers attempted to restore funds for construction of the second large carrier for the Navy. By a vote of 29 to 57, her amendment was rejected.

After the vote, Chairman Vinson of the Armed Services Committee said that the big carrier must be built. However, he agreed to go along with the "postponement," declaring:

"I want it clearly understood that this is nothing but a postponement. . . . We need another big carrier. Maybe we need a good many of them, but we can wait a little without endangering the country too much."

Seeks AF Build-Up

Congressman John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) called for a speed-up in the build-up of the Air Force to 143 Wing strength.

Warning the House against the risk of the House Committee's cuts in Air Force appropriations, he offered an amendment to increase funds for the procurement of aircraft from the $12,125,044,000 recommended by the Committee to $13,560,044,000.

The passage of his amendment, he said, plus the restoring of all other Committee cuts would bring the "target date" for a 143 Wing Air Force from something in 1956, the earliest target date possible under Committee cuts, to March of 1955.

Speaking on Representative Kennedy's amendment, Congressman Mahon said:

"Mr. Chairman, I am in complete sympathy with the objective of the gentleman from Massachusetts to increase the striking power of the Air Force, but the committee in drafting this bill had to take into consideration the economic conditions of the country, the clamor, indeed the demand, of Members of the Congress for a reduction in military spending. That temper of Congress has exhibited itself in reducing the bill in some particulars to a dangerous degree. Those are the facts confronting us."

"It is true that we are badly outnumbered in jet-fighter aircraft. We are not outnumbered, of course, in the bomber class, but we are in jet fighters, and the reason is very simple for those who will read the printed hearings. In 1945 when the war ended, we had 50,000 or 60,000 aircraft, mostly of the piston-engine type. We led all the world by a very wide margin."

"The Soviets took over with them into Russia—and the Russians themselves are not bad mechanics and technicians as people know—a number of scientists and engineers from Germany, and immediately after the end of World War II, in 1945, they began feverishly and desperately to build jet aircraft as rapidly as they could. For all intents and purposes our Nation suspended aircraft production after World War II, hoping that we were facing long days of peace. Not so with the Communists; they built jet aircraft very rapidly. We did not begin to build jet aircraft in numbers until just prior to the Korean war."

"The Air Force will have on hand on June 30, $14,000,000,000 to pay for aircraft, and we will give them in this bill about $12,000,000,000 more. That will give them about $26,000,000,000 to pay for aircraft. The gentleman would increase that figure about $1,000,000,000 more. Well, it would not get any additional aircraft during the coming fiscal year, but it would in about three years from now, as the gentleman knows, get us some more aircraft, and we may desperately need them then, but with the present temper of the House there is no chance to do anything about that situation. I would not ridicule the gentleman's amendment, in fact, I would like to support it, because in my heart I believe in the potency of air power in the search for peace. I believe the gentleman is seeking to move in the right direction, but we have to face the facts of life."

"I think this is all we can pass through the Congress at this time. As the Air Force moves along with the vast billions they have gotten, I think we are going to improve our Air Force's position."

The amendment was rejected.

Cut AF Funds

After voting down the proposal to give the Air Force additional funds, the House acted on an amendment by Representative Meader to cut funds for major procurement other than aircraft from $1.1 billion to $1 billion.

Again, there was much testimony concerning the Air Force supply system. Representative Brooks defended the need for separate Air Force purchases of many military items.

The first vote on the amendment was 42 ayes and 50 noes, but on a teller vote the amendment was adopted by vote of 81-72.

For Air Force maintenance and operation, Representative William C. Lantaff (D-Fla.) proposed a cut from $3,789,817,000 to $3,761,790,142. His amendment was adopted by vote of 70-62 after, once again, there was discussion on the Air Force supply system.

Transportation Amendment

An amendment by Representative Bonner to limit transportation of household goods and personal effects to 7,000 pounds of uncrated or 8,000 if crated was adopted without debate.

Then, there was more discussion on officer promotions, described in another article in this issue.

Final Action

Action on the appropriations bill was completed with adoption of the amendment to limit spending during the next fiscal year to $46 billion. The amendment was passed by a vote of 220-130.

Captain or lieutenant of the Navy	2.3	4.0	2.6597	2.25"

Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), ranking minority member of the House Armed Services Committee, said that if there were 24,000 officer demotions, "you are going to absolutely wreck the morale of the men in all branches of the Armed Services. If you will study your amendment," said Congressman Short to Representative Davis, "it will reveal that the great impact is not on the high-ranking officers, but it hits hardest, and by far the greatest number, lieutenants and captains."

Representative Short gave the House a report on what Congressman Davis' original amendment would do. He said the demotions would be as follows on 1 July 1952:

Army
Colonel to lieutenant colonel	115
Lieutenant colonel to major	681
Major to captain	412
Captain to first lieutenant	4,700
Total	5,908

Navy
Flag officer reductions	4
Captain to commander	192
Commander to Lieutenant commander	1,518
Lieutenant commander to lieutenant	2,015
Lieutenant to lieutenant junior grade	7,606
Total	11,335

Air Force
General (reductions)	59
Colonel to lieutenant colonel	1,184
Lieutenant colonel to major	2,120
Major to captain	2,700
Captain to first lieutenant	4,573
Total	10,636

Marine Corps
Generals	14
Colonels to lieutenant colonels	167
Lieutenant colonel to majors	167
Majors to captains	639
Captains to first lieutenants	950
Total	2,412

Congressman Short added:

"It should be noted that the heaviest impact of these reductions falls upon the lower grades, due in part to the cumulative effect of the reductions required from higher to lower grades."

"It is interesting to note that there are no reductions of Army generals, but 4,700 captains would be reduced to first lieutenants. There will be no promotion in fiscal 1953 because all of the officers who reverted would be the first promoted."

"In the Navy only four flag officers would be reduced, and again there would be practically no promotions."

"We also have the ridiculous situation of expanding the Air Force, increasing considerably the number of operational groups which require senior officers and at the same time forcing a reduction in the number of general officers in the Air Force, together with more than 10,600 other reductions in grade."

"We have the further ridiculous situation of having a bill scheduled for House debate in the very near future which would increase the size of the Marine Corps, while at the same time this bill would force a reduction of 14 general officers and over 2,388 other officers."

When Congressman Davis' revised amendment came up for vote on Wednesday, 9 April, he said "I had no intention of causing widespread demotions of officers at any time." He added:

"I did not believe such demotions would be necessary to conform to the previous drafts of this amendment, and I think the House should know that the increased complements provided in this amendment are, to a large extent, necessary because of the large number of promotions which have been made or have been committed between 31 October 1951, and 30 June 1952. I simply had no conception of the number of such promotions until I obtained additional information on them from the Pentagon yesterday. Obviously, these promotions cannot be reached by the terms of this amendment."

"I doubt whether the previous drafts were too harsh in fact. They were harsh in the sense that widespread demotions would have been caused. But these demotions would have been necessary only because of the heavy promotion schedule of the current fiscal year."

"The current heavy promotion program is not the fault of the officers promoted. Hence it would not be fair for them to suffer the demoralizing experience of demotion. The fault must be borne jointly by high officials of the armed services, the Bureau of the Budget, and the Congress. All have played a part in permitting an unhealthy and expensive situation."

AF Plane Losses

The Air Force has been reluctant during the past few years to give out details concerning loss of aircraft in operational accidents. However, this information has been made available now in Congressional testimony. During 1951, in more than 4,500,000 flying hours in Continental United States, 550 planes were lost in operational accidents.

Air Force officials supplied also estimated aircraft attrition per 100 planes per quarter, not including obsolescence. This was as follows: Heavy Bomber, 1.4; Medium Bomber, 3.5; Light Bomber, 4.2; Fighter, 5.0; Medium Transport, 1.2; and Heavy Transport, .9.

Invited into the lounge, the guests were actually confronted by a blarney stone, placed on the floor in the center of the room, and amid much hilarity, kissed the stone to insure their good-luck forever.

Challenged earlier to wear as much green as possible for the occasion, Mrs. Nixon, wife of Colonel T. Nixon, USFA's Chief of Staff, walked away with the honors.

During the social hour a song contest was held—the prize?—10 pounds of Irish potatoes.

■ SPENCE AFB, GA. The recent Fashion Show and Luncheon sponsored by the Officers Wives' Club of Spence AFB, Moultrie, Ga., 19 March, was a social event enjoyed by approximately 250 guests. Participating in the fashion revue were seven of Moultrie's leading stores, and 21 models selected from the Wives' Club and various local clubs.

A carousel theme was employed in the club. Red and white striped canopies were arranged around columns between which the stage ran. Clusters of gay colored balloons were suspended from the walls and balloons were painted on the programs. Carousel horses adorned the cards which marked the tables.

At the close of the show, Mrs. H. L. Kirkpatrick, president of the Officers Wives' Club, presented Mrs. Robert B. Goodman, who acted as general chairman of the affair, with a gift from the club, in expression of appreciation for her efforts on behalf of the show. She also extended thanks to all who cooperated in making the event a success.

Models taking part from the Wives' Club included Mrs. C. R. Dubose, Mrs. Wm. Adams, Mrs. E. E. Middleton, Mrs. G. A. Graham, Mrs. H. L. Anderson, Mrs. Jack Gilliland, Mrs. John Goldsberry, Mrs. Myles C. Stewart, Mrs. Edwin Josey, and Mrs. Lee Helm.

■ CAMP CARSON, COLO. A round of entertainment and solemn military ceremonies signaled the retirement on 31 March after 41 years of service of Brig. Gen. Walter W. Hess, Jr., commanding.

General Hess, Carson's commander for the past 19 months, was guest of honor at a dinner of the Colorado Springs Military Affairs Committee. Among the invited guests were General Benjamin Chidlaw, USAF, commander of the Air Defense Command, Colorado Springs, and Maj. General Irvine, commander of the Army Anti Aircraft Command, Colorado Springs.

All troops on the post participated in a review honoring General Hess on 29 March. The distinguished visitors at the review included five generals, active and retired.

In a final tribute to the retiring general, troops lined the route from the general's quarters to the post's main gate on Tuesday, 1 April. The general's car, led by a mounted troop from the 4th Field Artillery Battalion (Pack) proceeded over the two-mile route to the gate, where General Hess paused to review an honor guard and say his personal farewells to members of his staff.

■ FT. BENNING, GA. Nine members of the Burr family dedicated their lives to the military service during the past 57 years, and seven graduated from the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. Two lost their lives while serving their country.

The story of this patriotic family was revealed here when Capt. William E. Burr was assigned to the First Student Brigade as athletic and recreation officer. He is the family's most recent graduate of the military academy. He was commissioned in 1945.

Captain Burr's father, Col. William E. Burr, was a graduate of the Point, and his grandfather, General Edward Burr, who graduated in 1895, is now retired and living in Washington, D. C.

His maternal grandfather, Col. George W. Goode, also a West Point graduate, is now deceased.

Captain Burr's sister, Julie, married a West Pointer, 1st Lt. Charles R. Finley, who graduated in 1943, and a year later was killed in Normandy. Julie did her part in service of her country, too. She enlisted in the Women's Army Corps. His brother Robert, only male member of his immediate family who did not attend the USMA, was a private first class during World War II. He also was killed in Normandy.

A first cousin, Capt. Edward Burr II, was graduated from the academy in 1943 and now is a captain of field artillery. Another cousin is Lt. John Priest, a flier in the Naval Reserve, presently stationed at the Memphis, Tenn., Naval Air Station.

■ FT. BELVOIR, VA. On entering Woodlawn Hall on April Fool's Day, the 300 members and guests of the Officer Wives Club realized that, no fooling, Spring was here. A multicolored paper streamer ceiling formed a canopy over a long forsythia-bedecked luncheon table running nearly the length of the hall. The walls were decorated with cherry blossoms and the pillars were adorned by large pink peonies tied with broad pink crepe paper bows. The tables were decorated with forsythia and spring accessories, such as scarves, boutonnières, etc., to remind all that after the luncheon the delicious buffet would be removed and the long table transformed into a promenade for the latest in spring fashions provided and modeled by the Hecht Company of Washington.

The Post Garden Club added to the Spring atmosphere with its African Violet Sale Booth operating in a corner of the Hall.

The wives at the booth were Mesdames Herbert E. Brown, in charge, Thomas Hunter, Robert Histe, John Foizle and Richard Crawford.

Members and guests were received by Mrs. Stanley Scott, wife of the Commanding General and Honorary President of the Club. Mrs. Emil J. Peterson, Club President, and Mrs. Kenneth Maguire, President of the Officers Wives Card Club. All three wore exquisite spring parasols of tulle with spokes covered by tiny blossoms and tied with satin ribbons—the handiwork of Mrs. Herbert P. Donald and her mother, Mrs. P. B. Monke.

The Hostesses for the day were the members of the Officers Wives Card Club. Mrs. Maguire served as Chairman and her assistants were Mrs. Fred P. Beech, Mrs. Eldon L. McLeod, Mrs. Paul A. Loop, Mrs. Frank A. Gerig, Jr., Mrs. Robert B. McDowell, Mrs. James B. Meanor, Jr., Mrs. Lorres C. Thomas, Mrs. Ernest L. Trappell, Mrs. John C. Honea, Mrs. Burdette A. Shannon, Mrs. C. D. Crawford and Mrs. Herbert P. Donald, in charge of decorations.

■ SOUTHERN PINES, N. C. The Sandhills Kiwanis Club made up of residents of North Carolina's Sandhills District, honored General of the Army George C. Marshall and 10 other general officers of the Army and Air Force at a luncheon this week at the Southern Pines Country Club.

The principal speaker was Brig. Gen. William M. Gross, USAF, Commandant of the USAF Air Ground Operations School at Southern Pines. The "Generals Day" Luncheon brought together eight retired officers and two on active duty, all residents of the Pinehurst-Southern Pines area.

Those attending besides General Marshall and General Gross were: Maj. Gen. A. V. Arnold, former Military Governor of Korea; Maj. Gen. Harry Maloney; Maj. Gen. J. F. Barnes; Brigadier General Robert Burns Hill; Stuart Cutler; Roger M. Wicks; A. L. Sneed, and Pierson Menoher, at present Commanding General of Fort Bragg, N. C. Maj. Gen. Ira T. Wychoe unable to be present, was honored in absentia.

Pentagon Studies House Promotion Rider; Senate Certain to Hear New Testimony

Pentagon officials were relieved this week that modifications in a rider to the 1953 appropriations bill will not require thousands of officer demotions.

It can be expected, however, that the Senate will be asked to rescind the action—at least to modify it substantially—in order to prevent serious loss of efficiency and morale.

A full inquiry into the matter of promotions can be expected by the House Armed Services Committee, for in agreeing to the modified amendment of Representative Glenn R. Davis (R-Wisc.) Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) said that by 1 April 1953, when the amendment would become effective, the Committee will have an opportunity to study this problem in detail.

Although it was yet too early for firm forecasts by military officials, the following is the best available information on future promotion prospects.

Army

The approximately 6,000 officers who have been on eligible lists for advancement to the temporary ranks of captain, major, lieutenant colonel and colonel for months still can hope for advancement by the fall, with the exception of the promotions to colonel.

Thousands of Reserve officers will be leaving the Service and additional vacancies will develop. If no promotions were made, recalls likely would be required.

It will not be possible to estimate exactly when the promotions will be made until after Congress completes action on the appropriations bill.

But since Congressman Davis' rider does not go into effect until 1 April 1953 and since there will be additional vacancies for officer advancements, it is hoped that advancements can be made from the long-standing eligible lists.

As for additional selection boards to name new eligibles, it is yet too early to predict what will develop. The Army has had plans to convene new boards in the fall. Conceivably, new selections may be made before the end of the year, but the action by the House certainly will slow down advancements.

Air Force

The third-cycle temporary promotions planned for the current fiscal year undoubtedly will be made. Under terms of Representative Davis' original amendment, these advancements would have been impossible.

However, it is believed that the advancements can now be made. Major commands have completed selection action and funds are available, since this is the final increment in fiscal year 1952 advancements.

After 1 July, the promotion picture is not at all clear. The Air Force will be expanding its wings. Obviously, there will be vacancies for promotions. But whether or not any will be made remains to be seen.

Navy and Marine Corps

The action by the House of Representatives will "probably mean the selection of fewer numbers of officers than previously had been planned," a Navy spokesman told THE JOURNAL this week.

However, it was learned that both the Navy and Marine Corps will go ahead with present plans for 1952 selection boards. The first Marine boards will meet this month to name officers for temporary promotion to the ranks of major and captain. An announcement to that effect is expected next week.

The first Navy boards will be convened early in July to select captains for promotion to rear admiral. The Navy spokesman said the July date "is firm." Last year's board, which also met in July, named 36 Line officers for flag rank.

Marine Corps boards for general officers normally meet shortly after the Navy flag boards and it can be anticipated, therefore, that this year's boards will also meet in July. Both of the general officer boards met during that month last year.

In a story carried in THE JOURNAL last month, it was stated that the 1952 Marine boards would select greater numbers than those which met last year. The House appropriations bill amendments may eliminate this possibility.

On the other hand, observers note that Marine Corps expansion already approved in the 1952 appropriations will be rapid during the next two and one half months, since planned strength for the end of June is 235,000. This factor, together with the release of large numbers of Marine Reservists, may enable the Corps to keep its projected promotion plans intact.

The Navy said it is making an immediate study of the entire promotions field to determine what effect the new House percentages will have on its current plans.

ing last month. It is estimated that during March Navy and Marine air attacks had killed 1,288 enemy troops. In addition, as a result of these attacks there were destroyed or damaged during the month 7 tanks, 270 command posts and field pieces, 253 machine gun positions, 32 bunkers, 1 troop shelter, 38 ammunition dumps, 3 supply dumps, 32 vehicle revetments, 749 trucks and other vehicles, 387 carts, 71 oxen and mules, 28 locomotives, 629 railway cars, 2 railway repair facilities, 112 railway bridges, 85 railway tunnels and by-passes, 1,277 junks and sampans, 1,844 buildings, 84 warehouses, 2 relay stations, 4 factories, 5 bulldozers and 2 boat yards. During the month Naval and Marine air attacks cut Red rail tracks in 2,756 places.

Heavy overcasts and rain during most of this week failed to provide complete protection for Communist targets in North Korea as Far East Air Force planes fought through murky weather to strike the enemy. The number of sorties was sharply reduced during several days this week, but hundreds of bombers and fighter-bombers took to the air each day, and pounded enemy lines of communication and rear area installations.

Patrol flights of the fast American Sabre Jet fighters were greatly curtailed by the weather and on some days they failed to make their usual sorties deep into enemy territory. On Sunday, 6 April, under favorable conditions the Sabres encountered formations of enemy MIG jets and destroyed four, probably destroyed two and damaged eight enemy planes. American losses, if any, were not announced. There were three separate battles, all in the afternoon.

Destroy MIGs

In the first engagement 23 Sabres, flying protective cover for fighter-bombers, encountered elements of a 40-MIG formation between the Chongchon and Yalu Rivers. The ensuing duels between jets were fought at altitudes from 7,000 to 40,000 feet. In this battle three MIGs were shot down, one was probably destroyed and five were damaged.

Later in the afternoon another air combat occurred north of the Chongchon River, in which 24 Sabres encountered 12 MIGs. One enemy plane was destroyed, another probably destroyed, and two were damaged. The MIG destroyed in this engagement was shot down by Capt. Ivan C. Kincheloe, SAF, of Cassopolis, Mich. As it was his fifth individual air victory in Korea he thereby became the tenth American jet ace of the Korean War. Late in the afternoon in the third air combat of the day one MIG was damaged.

The heavy weather of much of the week made it necessary for American all-weather, night-flying B-29 medium bombers to use radar in attacking enemy communications lines and front-line positions. The Superforts dropped 90 tons of high explosives on the Chongju rail bridge complex, encountering meager flak and no air opposition. Other B-29s on close support missions dropped air-bursting bombs on enemy troops and supply concentrations immediately behind the battle line.

During most of the week Allied fighter-bombers were held to a minimum number of sorties by thick weather. However, the planes that were air-borne sought holes in the clouds to dip through and strike rail lines and enemy-occupied buildings.

Despite the bad weather B-26 light bombers and shore-based Marine planes destroyed scores of supply-laden enemy trucks attempting to move to the front under cover of fog and darkness.

American propeller-driven Mustangs, directed by T-6 Mosquito spotters, struck enemy positions at the eastern tip of the battle front, inflicting numerous casualties, knocking out bunkers and mortars, and exploding an ammunition dump. Marine fighter-bombers, striking in the same area, killed many enemy soldiers, and destroyed troop bunkers.

South Korean Mustangs ripped rails on a 15-mile stretch of track north of Haeju. American F-80 Shooting Stars and F-84 Thunder Jets cut rail lines east of Haeju, and between Samdong and Sunchon. F-80s also knocked out a number of enemy flak positions.

In a summary of last week's air operations the Far East Air Force announced that not a single American land plane was lost to enemy ground fire during that period. One Australian MK-8 jet was shot down by Red anti-aircraft guns; two American F-86 Sabre Jets were lost in air combat; and two B-26 light bombers, and one F4U were lost to unknown causes. One American B-29 medium bomber was lost when it crashed in Japan, and one RB-29 fell in the sea off Northern Japan. Some of the pilots and crew members were rescued. During the week 40 enemy MIG-15 jet planes were destroyed or damaged, for one of the best weekly records of the war.

In addition to the Red planes shot down or damaged the Far East Air Force and attached units during the week destroyed or damaged 95 rail cars, 8 locomotives, 385 enemy-held buildings, and 80 gun emplacements. They also inflicted 175 casualties on the enemy, and cut rail lines in 635 places and highways at 18 locations.

Since the beginning of the war the Far East Air Force and attached Marine Corps and friendly foreign aircraft destroyed 413 enemy planes, probably destroyed 115 and damaged 525. United States Air Force losses since the start of the war include 48 jets in air combat, 164 to ground fire, and 31 to other causes, for a total of 226 jets; propeller-driven plane losses include 16 in air combat, 246 to ground fire, and 31 to other causes, for a total of 293, making the aggregate Air Force losses of planes of all types 519. In addition four friendly foreign planes were lost in air combat, 40 to ground fire, and 11 to other causes; while 40 shore-based Marine planes were lost to ground fire and eight to other causes. The overall losses of Allied planes from the start of the Korean War through last week total 622.

Since the start of the conflict planes of the Far East Air Force and attached units have flown 390,245 sorties, and are estimated to have destroyed 43,765 vehicles, 8,110 rail cars, 525 bridges, 920 tanks, and 675 tunnels, and to have inflicted 136,795 troop casualties on the enemy.

The Defense Department this week announced that American battle casualties for the Korean War, to include notifications to next of kin through 4 April, now total 107,134, an increase of 178 since last week's report. Included are 18,723 killed in action or died of wounds; 77,798 wounded in action, including 1,750 who subsequently died; and 12,557 missing in action, including 194 known to have died, 1,381 who returned to military control, and 1,089 known to have been captured by the enemy, leaving 9,893 currently missing. Of the total casualties, 87,502 were sustained by the Army, 1,266 by the Navy, 17,225 by the Marine Corps, and 1,111 by the Air Force.

porters, were shipped into desert exile last month.

John J. McCloy, High Commissioner in Germany, comes to Washington next week to present his views on budgetary matters to the congressional committees. He is known to favor some sharp reductions in present privileges enjoyed by Army and other U. S. personnel in Germany, once the occupation forces become (under the prospective contractual arrangement with the Bonn government) "defense forces." Headed for elimination or marked revision appears to be the present arrangement whereby German household servants are supplied to a great many of the occupation establishment at small costs; likewise the special train for American personnel, military and civilian, which on numerous occasions is operated for passengers much less numerous than the capacity.

William H. Draper, jr., one-time Under-Secretary of the Army, and latterly most active in western defense matters, has been appointed U. S. Permanent Representative on the newly created North Atlantic Council. His alternate and advisor is Livingston T. Merchant.

Need AFOTC Instructors

The Air Force has approximately 300 vacancies for billets as instructors with ROTC units.

The officers are needed in the grades of lieutenant through colonel. Normal tour of duty for AFOTC instructor personnel is four years, the Air Force said.

Army Orders Locomotives

Eighty-three Alco-GE lightweight locomotives, capable of operating on nearly any wide gage track in any climate in the world, have been ordered from General Electric by the Army's Transportation Corps Depot at Marietta, Pa.

Delivery of the $14,296,790 order is scheduled for 12 months, depending upon materials allocations, G-E officials said. The contract for the versatile 120-ton units is the Transportation Corps' largest locomotive order since World War II.

The locomotives will be built by the American Locomotive Co. at Schenectady and will be supplied with G-E electrical equipment manufactured in General Electric's Erie, Pa., Works. They will be powered by standard Alco 12-cylinders 1600-hp diesel engine.

WW II Transportation History

Growth of the Army Transportation Corps into an organization which accomplished the unprecedented task of moving more than 7,290,000 passengers and 126,787,875 measurement tons to overseas destinations during the 45 months of World War II is described in "Transportation Corps: Responsibilities, Organization and Operations," which will be released for publication 8 April.

The book is part of a sub-series of the Army's official narrative, "The U.S. Army in World War II," being prepared by the Office of the Army Chief of Military History. Written by Chester Wardlow, who was on the executive staff of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Gross, Army Chief of Transportation during the war, the work will be sold for $3.25 by the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office.

Navy Tests R-4Q

Nineteen flights have been completed in a structural flight test demonstration of the R-4Q (Navy version of the C-119) flown at the Naval Air Station, Patuxent, Md. The R-4Q was flown by crews of the manufacturer, Fairchild Engine and Aircraft Corp. It was reported that the performance exceeded specifications.

Maneuverability features of the R-4Q in relationship to its high speed were demonstrated in four main phases of the flight test program.

1. Abrupt rudder kick: 344 pounds rudder pedal force applied in three-tenths of a second at an airspeed of 222 mph.
2. High speed sideslip: 300 pounds rudder pedal pressure applied at 261 mph.
3. Rolling pullout with maximum alleron force: Demonstrated at 248 mph.
4. Fully loaded maneuverability: In a dive the R-4Q was subjected to 3½ G's, i. e., more than three times its own weight or 246,000 pounds.

Organize Detroit NDTA Unit

A Detroit Chapter of the National Defense Transportation Association will be organized at a dinner to be held in the Book-Cadillac Hotel on 7 May, according to Col. Francis W. Cray, Executive Director of the Association.

The need for a Detroit Chapter of the Association, devoted to transportation planning and preparedness, was emphasized at a recent meeting of transportation experts from Detroit automotive and transportation organizations.

Present at the meeting of the Steering Committee were:

E. G. Plowman, Vice President—Traffic, U. S. Steel Company; James F. Haley, Manager, Traffic & Transportation Department, Koppers Company; Robert W. Bruce, Manager, Midwest Division, American President Lines; Charles W. Bishop, Detroit Attorney; Norbert Brennan, Director of Traffic, Chrysler Corporation; Charles R. Herrick, Traffic Manager, Packard Motor Car Company; Henry Combes, Traffic Manager, Nash Motors Division, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation; Frank Armstrong, Vice President, Red Star Transit Company; Leslie Allman, President, The Allman Company, Inc.; John L. Meehan, Freight Traffic Manager, New York Central Railroad; Parker Donovan, Assistant Freight Traffic Manager, Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad; Joe O'Connor, Division Freight Agent, Clinchfield Railroad Company; Burson H. Lewis, Assistant Freight Traffic Manager, Wabash Railroad Company; Herbert Phillips, Freight Traffic Manager, Pennsylvania Railroad Company; D. M. Fishbeck, General Agent, Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad; Frank Baird-Smith, Refiners Transport & Terminal Corporation; J. V. Murphy, Vice President & General Traffic Manager, Great Lakes Greyhound Lines; Lt. Col. Ralph C. McCrum, PMS&T, Wayne University; Bill Hoffman, Nicholson Universal Steamship Company, and Gerald Heatter, Transportation Analyst, Board of Commerce.

Leslie Allman, Frank Baird-Smith, Herbert Phillips, Norbert Brennan and Charles W. Bishop were named to a committee to plan the organization meeting which would put the Chapter on a permanent basis.

New Drop Forge Plant

Top executives of Southern California's aircraft industries, together with civic, industrial and union leaders of a dozen cities and officers of the Western Air Procurement District of the Air Materiel Command participated recently in groundbreaking ceremonies for the new $3,500,000 drop forge plant to be constructed at Venice, Calif. by the Arcturus Manufacturing Corporation, through a facilities contract with the Air Force.

"This new plant will make the Pacific Coast aircraft industry largely self-sufficient in its requirements for large steel forgings," said James W. Sheehan, president of the firm.

The new building will cover an area of 30,000 square feet. Adjoining it will be a steel storage yard of 20,000 square feet serviced by a 7½ ton overhead bridge crane and a 25,000 square foot area for shipping and material handling. The new facility will have the largest drop forging hammers west of Chicago, including 16,000 and 20,000 pound units.

Test New Navy Engine

A new Navy gas-turbine engine weighing only 212 pounds and capable of operation by a green crew in less than ten minutes is being tested at the Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis.

Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, revealed in THE JOURNAL last December that such an engine was being perfected. He said, "Aircraft gas turbines are being thoroughly studied for conversion to marine use" and that they would probably be put to work as boosters to get high speed.

The new power plant undergoing tests at Annapolis has been installed in a 36-foot landing craft. Because it is small and light, the unit can be replaced by two men in approximately two hours, the Navy said, and it may be completely torn down and reassembled in six hours. The latter feat is possible because there are few moving parts and maintenance is relatively simple.

The radical new engine develops 175 horsepower although weighing only 212 pounds. A conventional diesel unit of comparable output weighs ten times as much. This saving of 1,900 pounds, the Navy said, "will allow more men and equipment to be carried ashore per boat during amphibious operations."

An outstanding characteristic of the new power plant is its simplicity of operation. A crew of four, it was pointed out, may be taught to operate it in less than ten minutes. Boatswain's Mate Second Class James E. Blackwell, of the Naval Small Facility at Annapolis, operated the LCVP expertly from verbal instructions, and on his first run piloted the boat for approximately three hours, stopping, starting, maneuvering and landing after the brief period of instruction.

In its general design, a gas turbine is similar to a jet aircraft engine. The power itself is harnessed by a secondary turbine, where it turns a drive shaft rather than being exhausted as jet thrust.

The new gas turbines are being built for the Navy by the Boeing Airplane Co.

Naval Ordnance Exhibit

A press showing of a mobile ordnance exhibit, designed by the Navy Bureau of Ordnance to stimulate small business interest in the manufacturing of ordnance equipment, was held in the Main Navy Building, Washington, D. C., on 9 April.

The exhibit will soon begin a 48-state, 14,000-mile tour, visiting all cities over 400,000 population. Ordnance personnel will accompany the exhibit to advise manufacturing representatives on methods of obtaining Navy ordnance contracts. The exhibit will begin the official tour in Baltimore, Md., Tuesday, 15 April. Location in Baltimore will be the National Guard Armory.

Manages Ordnance Plant

James A. Ward has been named General Manager of Louisiana Ordnance Plant, operated by Remington Rand Inc., according to an announcement by B. F. Anderson, assistant vice president of the North American Manufacturing Activities of Remington Rand.

A graduate of the Purdue University Electrical Engineering School, Mr. Ward has been associated with Remington Rand since the company began operations at the Sangamon Ordnance Plant in 1942. His first position with the company was as director of maintenance.

To European Exchanges

Lt. Col. C. B. McCoid, who since 1947 has served as Deputy Chief for Operations, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, has departed for an assignment with the European Exchange System, it was announced by Brig. Gen. Edward H. White, Chief of the Exchange Service.

In his new assignment, Colonel McCoid will be serving under Col. William H. Kendall, Exchange Officer for EUCOM, with whom he served from 1947 to 1951 when the latter was Chief of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Colonel McCoid in civilian life held important executive positions in the chemical industry. At various times he was President or Vice President of several companies in that field.

During World War II, Colonel McCoid served in the Transportation Corps in the European Theater as Transportation Officer for the Seine Section and later for Western Base Section. He was Secretary of the Transportation Division, OMGUS (Berlin) from 1945 to 1947.

During World War I and the years following, Colonel McCoid served as Exchange Officer in addition to his other duties, at Fort Rodman, Massachusetts and Fort Flagler, Washington.

Last year Colonel McCoid was sent on temporary duty to Peru where, at the request of the Peruvian government, he assisted in a reorganization of the Peruvian PX System.

Col. Gillespie Joins Firm

Col. James M. Gillespie, USAF-Ret., has returned to AiResearch Manufacturing Co. to serve on a full-time basis as manager of the export department, C. N. Monson, vice president and manager, has announced.

Colonel Gillespie originally joined the Garrett Corporation in 1948, the same year in which he retired from the Air Force. During the past year he has been associated with the Garrett Corporation as a consultant, dealing with AiResearch equipment in use overseas in the military defense build-up and aircraft components in service on commercial foreign-flag airlines.

During World War II Colonel Gillespie served as chief of flight test at Wright Field, Dayton; chief of the power plant laboratory, and deputy chief of engineering and procurement under Maj. Gen. K. B. Wolfe.

Jet Engine Production

The Pratt & Whitney Aircraft division of United Aircraft Corporation at East Hartford, Conn., is negotiating a license to permit the Ford Motor Company of Detroit, Mich., to build the J-57 Turbo-Wasp jet engine for the military services, William P. Gwinn, general manager, announced this week.

The Ford J-57 production would be in addition to that of P&W's expanded East Hartford plant where the J-57 is currently being built. Ford was previously licensed to build the P&W Wasp Major, a 3,800-horsepower piston engine.

Order Air Evac. Planes

The Air Force has ordered a number of medium transport aircraft, designated the C-131, from the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Company, San Diego, Calif.

The new Air Force plane, an air evacuation transport, will be equipped with litters, rearward facing seats, and equipment to care for medical patients.

The C-131 will be the second military version of the commercial Convair 240, the first being the T-29 multipurpose navigation trainer.
